on now...
really?

Okay... we get that the new and improved upper elementary building was necessary, and we were all for it. Still, that means we have to wait until June 12 to accept our diplomas and start the rest of our lives. Every other class graduated within the first week of June.

Graduation was already too far away, 230 days to be exact, when the phone rang to cancel school the next day. What? Who has a cancellation in the middle of October? Right, that would be us, all because Beaver Run Reservoir had a little too much algae in it.

Typically, we have a cancellation when two feet of snow fall while we sleep. Not this year. Stuck in the middle of the Polar Vortex with temperatures 10 below zero, we missed two days in January without an inch of snow. One more day to make up, one more day between us and graduation.

Trial by fire

In the welding shop at the Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center, Tommy Pollick (12) welds two pieces of metal together to refine his skills. Pollick said, "We learned to overhead stick weld in our first year in the shop. Still, it's a skill that we use on a regular basis." The vo-tech center offered 12 different programs from which students could choose.

The conclusion was unanimous. We would not graduate, not on June 12, maybe not even this summer. No way it could happen, not with everything standing in our way. Each setback, each obstacle, pushing us dangerously close to the edge of insanity. I mean, Senior year feels long enough already. Still, I suppose there have been some irreplaceable memories...

Like that last home football game against Latrobe. The student section was a sea of blue and gold. Linking arms with the class of 2014 to sing the Alma Mater for the final time at Davis Field united us all, even if only for those three verses. And nothing compared to the screaming rush of fans pouring onto the field after the final buzzer rang, declaring us the victors by 11 points.

And of course, no happiness could beat the feeling of turning in that completed senior project. Nine weeks and six to eight pages later, getting the folder off our desks and into our English teacher's hands felt like sweet victory. Four English teachers, 309 projects to read through and grade. The odds were not in their favor.

And, I don't think any of us could forget Mr. Gonella's performance at "Dancing with the Teachers" either. Though many may not believe it, we do; we saw it. In the middle of the hip hop performance, our favorite Italian principal did in fact come leaping across the stage dressed as a pink fairy princess ballerina, complete with wings, a crown, and a tutu. Yes, you read that right.

Okay, so maybe the year didn't need to end so soon after all. But the memories, moments, and laughs couldn't last forever. Eventually, our class would need to cross the line that has been 18 years in the making. Sooner or later, June 12 would come, and it would finally be our turn to cross the threshold, to step into the adult world with only our cap and Dr. Meighan's signature to verify we were ready. To take one giant leap of faith and go...

UP in arms

Beneath the historic Grand Stand at Davis Field, avid fans show their excitement for the home team at the Neon-Night themed game versus Hempfield. Brandon Smail (12) said, "Everyone got really pumped up for the theme and dressed in bright colors. All the boys looked hilarious in girls' neon clothes. Smail attended every game of the season, both home and away."

From Selfie Sunday to Throwback Thursday, students constantly post pics

story: e. knell (10)

Half of the population seemed to adore social media websites, turning "Selfie Sunday" and "Throwback Thursday" into national holidays. Fluent in the language of hashtags and abbreviations, students rattled through their favorite picture filters faster than they could list their times tables. Patricia Berry (12) said, "Instagram and Twitter blow up with selfies every Sunday. I think some people get a self-esteem boost from every like they get on their pictures; that's the only reason I can see for posting one every Sunday."

The other half of the population loved to hate on all things Twitter, Facebook, or Instagram related. Claiming to use their own accounts only to laugh at the idiocy of others or for Candy Crush, haters said the fake niceties and narcissism of people on the sites did nothing but annoy them. Regardless, they still couldn't bring themselves to log off the computer. "Stupid. It's all honestly just ridiculous. I have a Twitter, but I don't waste my life posting selfies on it or looking at other people's excessive number of selfies," Andrew Yohe (12) said.

While the two sides didn't agree, "Selfie Sunday" continued to the end of the year.

Who wins the death battle? Wolverine or Spiderman?

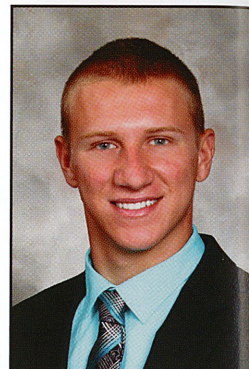

Well, Spiderman is superhot, so he'd beat Wolverine any day. Not the Toby Maguire one, but the new one with Andrew Garfield. He is FINE. No offense to Hugh Jackman, but he just doesn't bring it anymore. To be honest, they both suck. Neither of them has been played by Nicolas Cage.

boys show a sweeter side

story: m. Kiebler (12)

Boyfriend finds creative way to ask girl to prom

Girls could relate to the left out feeling when only two months before the dance, they remained dateless. Friends already found dates, dresses, and made hair appointments, but others couldn't find dates. They simply needed a boy to pop the one simple question... nothing fancy, just ask.

In the past, asking a girl to prom or Homecoming involved a simple question, just a few brave words. However, recently, boys stepped up their game and made the question a memorable one. Gracie McDermott (12) said "yes" with a grin when asked to her junior prom in a sweet manner.

McDermott said, "A few days prior, I jokingly tweeted about looking for someone to share a Dairy Queen ice cream cake with me. Then, at musical practice one day after school, my good friend Dylan Dulick surprised me with a heart shaped ice cream cake that had Prom? written on it in red icing. Prom was a blast and I'll always remember this sweet experience"

Flowers, cakes, and big signs represented only a few of the creative ways boys asked girls to dances.

Twins Unveiled

Do you find yourself finishing each other's sentences or sharing the same thoughts?

"All the time. If we're talking about something that we did together to other people, it always seems to come out at the same time. We have a lot of the same thoughts and opinions on clothes; it makes it easier because then you have twice the outfits to pick from. It's a shame because we have different shoe sizes, though," Sydney Dumbaugh (12) said.

As you grew up, did your parents dress you in the same clothes as your brother?

Cam Smail (12) said, "When we were little, my mom always bought us the same clothes. But, as we got older, we started to get different clothes. We discovered neither of us really liked looking like the other, and as we grew, we weren't the same size anymore. We still shopped at the same stores, but we made an effort to avoid anything that the other bought."

Do your parents treat the two of you in different ways or have a favorite?

"We're treated differently in certain aspects. I think my parents worry about me less than Morgan, even though I'm younger. They give the things that require more responsibility to her, though; if we're home alone and there's chores to do, my mom will just tell my sister because she knows I probably won't do them. Rewarding us for accomplishments is all the same though," Nate Kiebler (12) said.

Behind his house in New Kensington, Tim Conroy (12) zeros in on his antlered target. Conroy said, "Bow hunting is much more challenging than with a rifle. You have to get much closer and more personal with the deer." In his lifetime, Conroy bagged two bucks with a bow and one with his rifle.

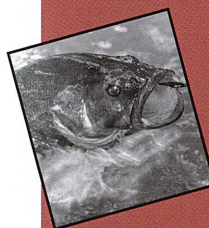

Hunting is more intense. You get a huge adrenaline rush when a deer walks past, and a higher level of thought goes into it than fishing. Fishing is boring, and anyone with half a brain can do it. Still, it takes a whole lot more time and practice to become a good hunter than it does to become a good fisherman.

Kayla Ball (12)

I like both, but fishing is great because it's relaxing and carefree. It can take all your worries away, at least for a few hours. It's something you can do alone or with your friends, and on a hot summer day you can jump in the water and go for a swim.

kids on the block

Move to new school proves different for each senior

Not all seniors spent all four years at the same school; some transferred part way through. The experiences differed widely for each person. Some loved the change, while others just wanted to change back.

"I hated coming to a new school. Everything was different. I didn't have any friends at first, but it got better as I started talking to more people," Kevin Kunkle (12) said.

Anastasia Clayton (12) experienced diverse groups when she came.

Clayton said, "It was intimidating. Everybody was really nice, but I didn't like it.

It was tough deciding which group of friends I wanted to be in. After a while, it got better though."

For Jensen York (12), the new school welcomed her with open arms.

"I came at the beginning of my junior year. Even though we were older and everyone had already found their group of friends, everyone was still nice and accepting of me. It was a good feeling. I love it here now."

Whether they spent four years in the same school, or transferred, upon graduation night, it really didn't matter.

In one of the most vital and pivotal games of the season, Lincoln Clayton (10) runs the ball down field. Clayton said, "Nobody in the WPIAL really thought that Kiski had a chance to beat Pine Richland. We won by a landslide." Clayton played football since the age of six-years-old.

Eager to pump up the crowd, Bobby Reed (12) anticipates the fans' response to his chant at Gateway. Reed said, "It was incredible to be able to take over 150 students to an away game. It really shows the support that the fans have for the football team." He recognized I Believe as his favorite cheer.

Game gone wrong

Just before a play at the Gateway game, Joey Brungo (12) eyes up his opponents. "We knew if we could hang with the Gators that we could be competitive. It just didn't go as we had hoped," Brungo said. He played wide receiver for the varsity team.

As if the student section didn't have enough energy already, to further pump up the crowd and support the team, Mitch Nagy (12) invented a stadium phenomenon. With seven dollars per head and one short trip to Staples, the student section featured six oversized paper heads of various players and coaches. Passed from hand to hand and waved high for all to see, the huge heads attached to wooden sticks came as an exciting shock the first time they appeared, especially to the players whose faces appeared on them.

Not afraid to take credit where deserved, Mitch Nagy (12) said, "It was a brilliant idea; it's new and not something you see at other schools. Sure we have a good student section, but by making us different, I made us even better."

Marchers dissect show concept

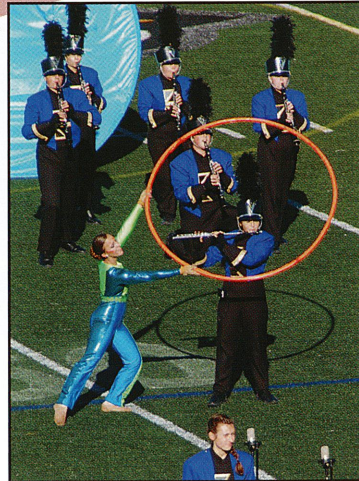

story: e. knell (10)

On the Spot, written entirely by band directors Mr. Pityk and Mr. Heiny, served as the theme for marching band's competition show this past fall. Audiences literally saw spots as the band incorporated circles as props, embellishments on costumes, and many other aspects of the performance.

Head drum major and saxophone player Austin Feydt (12) said, "When I first heard the show music, I was ecstatic. When I learned the theme was centered around polka dots, not so much. Once we started putting it together, and watching the spots move on the field, I came to love the concept."

Another aspect of spots came from every member having their own personal expandable spot—difficult to work with at times, but well worth it. The band proved ready to accept the challenge and ran circles around their competitors.

solo spotlight

Featured with the huge orange hoop, Jackie Jupina (11) performs her flute solo during the ballad of the band's On the Spot show. "Megan Beer danced around me and held the hoop above my head to put me on the spot," Jupina said. She further said, "The performance was nerve-racking but totally worth it in the end."

how'd they do that?

Megan Omcikus (12)

Comprised of a metal ring and cloth, Mr. Pityk and his staff had the boosters construct 66 expandable hoops that came off like a magic trick to audience members. When small, band members hid them in their uniforms. They then unveiled and expanded them in a full band dance feature.

heavy load to carry

Just prior to the end of the band's On the Spot opener, Josh Porterfield (12) performs in his first set of the ballad. Porterfield said, "Lugging around that tuba was tedious at times, but I just had to switch instruments to meet the overall needs of the band." He formerly played the clarinet in the regiment for two years.

Pretty in Pink

At the tail end of Redline Tango, Chloe Simms (12) lifts her pink ball as the final visual focus. "It was scary getting lifted because it took a lot of trust, and sometimes I fell," Simms said. She recognized On the Spot as her favorite show of the four that she participated in over the years.

Regiment prepares two shows for season

story: m. kiebler (12)

twice as nice

The band worked overtime preparing two very different shows to showcase their talents, even more than usual. The competition show, On The Spot, promoted a jazzy tone and featured both the entire band, as well as selected soloists. For the first time ever, though, the football halftime show differed from the competition show.

The halftime show combined Bon Jovi's Living on a Prayer, You Give Love a Bad Name, and Wanted Dead or Alive. As another first for the year, the cheerleaders joined forces with the colorguard for a group dance during the Bon Jovi-themed halftime show. Spectators, not only jazz and Bon Jovi lovers, found twice as much instrumental music in the performances.

Individuals demonstrate school spirit in varied arenas

Just as each student displayed his/her own personality in unique ways, avid fans put in extra efforts to display school spirit in many ways: in the hallways, over the internet, and with varied articles of clothing. Through bright, splatter painted banners, to the new spirit scarves, to the mottoes chanted at football games, school spirit made a huge impact, and those who participated hoped to bring the student body together in the stands. A tradition now handed over to the juniors, seniors certainly set the spirit bar high.

Team rallies through hardships

story: e. knell (10)

Since the seniors' eighth grade year, the volleyball team encountered many difficult times with both coaches and players.

"A lot...we've been through a lot. We just keep going. We banded together as a family, a really close one. I am so lucky that I have this family to fall back on. We keep each other strong and always have someone to talk to," said Gracie McDermott (12).

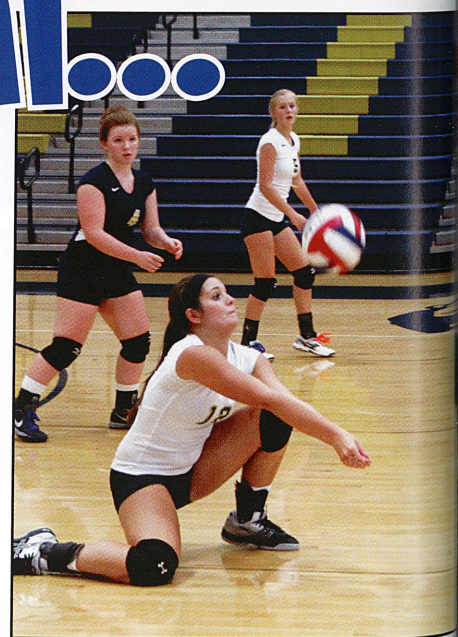

First, they coped with the loss of Coach Jaime Moran, then teammate Jenna Prusia, and finally the cancer relapse of yet another coach, which remained an ongoing fight.

"As a team, we had to overcome a lot of hardships with our coaches, Jaime and Ellen. Going through it was tough; we've really grown together as a team. We all trust each other," said Liz Recchia (11).

Gone but not forgotten, the girls played each game with Jaime, Jenna, and the often absent Ellen in mind.

Rachel Frye (12) said, "We have a saying: One team, One heart. We say it before every game; it helps us. We say it as a tribute to Jaime, Jenna, and Ellen."

With Jen Anderson (9) in the back row, Sydney Hessom (10) and Bailey Seagriff (10) block a spike against the Hempfield Spartans on September 19. "We really don't like any of the opposing teams, but their middle hitter was a giant. It was a big deal to block her," Seagriff said. Seagriff played outside hitter and back-up setter for the JV team.

Cast and crew recall times spent with fine, fun, furried friend

Everyone who attended last spring's production of Annie experienced a canine phenomenon the moment Sandy's paws hit center stage. During rehearsal, however, difficulties arose around the creation of this playful character. In fact, the stage behavior of Star, the furry actor who won the role of "Sandy," became a reoccurring concern for the cast and crew. According to Lauren Bono (12), the crew encountered several issues when trying to acquaint Star with the set.

"In the beginning, we had trouble getting her to cooperate. Often times, she would sniff around the set pieces or become distracted by the people in the wings," Bono said.

The cast experienced similar problems while training Star. Maddy Costanza (12), the actress who played Annie, remembered how long it took Star to learn how to behave accordingly.

"It took her awhile to warm up to me. Anytime she saw her trainer standing in the wings, she would run to her and pull me along," Costanza said.

Another challenge the cast faced involved training Star to pick up Annie's glove during a scene. This task required numerous attempts.

Costanza said, "First, we tried putting goldfish in the glove, hoping she would be attracted to the scent. Unfortunately, the smell was not strong enough. But when we tried hot dogs, Star picked up the glove immediately."

In the end, all went according to plan. Sandy's exceptional acting stole the hearts of the audience, and with a wag of her tail, she became the "star" of the show.

double Playtime

Covering first base in the home game against Franklin Regional, Raven Terrill (11) readies herself for a quick play. "I remember that we had players on first and third with only one out. A girl hit the ball to center, Liz got the out at second, and I got the last out tagging first," Terrill said. Terrill also played both catcher and in the outfield.

about base

Who stole the most bases and why?

Safe at second! Stealing bases proved a risky, yet worthwhile move on the softball diamond. With the need for speed, strategy, and specific timing, not everyone on the softball team dashed between the bases.

"Taylor Muffie stole the most bases last season. She was really fast, probably the fastest on the team," Emma Weaver (12) said.

When determining strategy towards stealing bases, Amber Bumbaugh (9) offered insight.

"When you decide to steal a base, you can't hesitate. Your mind has to be made up, and you just have to go for it," said Bumbaugh.

Stealing bases significantly affected the team and contributed to every win.

AP Spanish classes make ornaments as presents

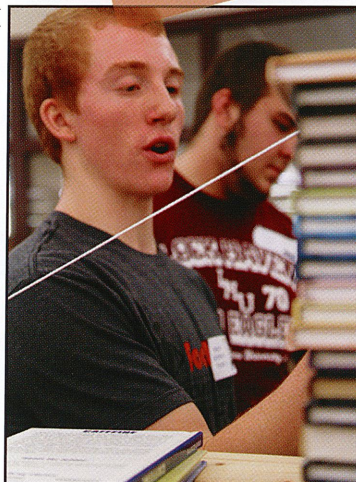

story: t. caldwell (11)

Serving a dual purpose, both festive and generous, the AP Spanish V class made holiday ornaments just before the December break. Ms. Varano devised a list of possible ornaments to create, and students wrote step by step directions in Spanish on how to build them. Then, in pairs, students presented their ornament to the class, explaining and demonstrating in Spanish how they made them. Next, they guided their peers in replicating them once again. After all presentations commenced, the class presented the finished products to Mr. Donati's life skills classes as gifts.

"I worked with Zak Hudak (12), and we made the clip on cutie. It was easy enough—just pipe cleaners and beads. Still, explaining it in Spanish was hard, especially using common words so that everybody else could follow along," Alley Carter (12) said.

Partner projects... love them or hate them?

pair it up

story: m. keibler (12)

Always a topic of controversy among teachers and students alike, but always a part of class, partner projects developed an infamous reputation. Certain students loved partner work, reveling in the chance to work with a friend, split the workload, or leech onto the smartest kid in the class. Others dreaded them and would rather complete them on their own.

Teachers also remained divided on the subject, aware that partner projects often produced unfair pairings. Still, instructors recognized that employers looked to hire people with teamwork skills.

Unavoidable, students and teachers adapted and survived group projects. The success of the projects, however, varied greatly.

For many people at the school, certain accessories made or broke a good outfit. From head to toe, the fashion industry provided countless items to allow high school students to express themselves as individuals. While the majority of the boys seemed to don their usual camo, boots, jeans, and other apparel typical of the western Pennsylvania region, the girls seemed to pay more homage to trendiness, fads, and fast-forward fashion. Certainly, the school's female population didn't limit their creative choices to only shirts and pants.

All involved in choir and band learned to sight read music at some point; sight reading required musicians to play or sing music without seeing it beforehand.

story: m. kiebler (12)

Who would have ever thought that a tenth of a second could make such a big difference? Ask any female athlete on the track and field team, and her face would fall as she responded with a solemn expression. Losing section championships by such a narrow margin last year (only one tenth of a second), runners, throwers, and jumpers alike realized how big of an impact one-tenth of a second could have on overall team performance and a meet score.

Concerning the close loss, Stephanie Lednak (11) said, "Everyone needs to push as hard as they can at the end of their event. The difference between first and second place could be the point that makes or breaks the entire meet. Winning another section title would be awesome, and knowing we were so close last year should give us motivation and confidence that we can do it again this upcoming spring."

Craving a comeback, the girls' track and field team began preparing for the upcoming spring season during the fall months, if only to shave off that single second.

On October 6, the marching band hosted their yearly Car Cruise-In. The show provided an opportunity for community members to showcase their cars. From fancy cars, to old cars, to an eighteen-wheeler, and an off-roading Jeep, everyone brought their wheels. Besides giving people a chance to show off their sweet rides, the Car Cruise-In brought in thousands of dollars again for the marching band's general fund.

Students share their nightmare experiences while driving

As the number of students passing their license test rose, so did the number of troubles encountered in their cars. Between paying for their own gas, sharing a car with siblings, getting lost, witnessing accidents, or braving the snow covered roads, young drivers certainly understood how much distress can occur over driving.

Chris Rosella (11) loved his Jeep, but not how much money he spent on it.

Rosella said, "My car is pretty old and has over 145,000 miles on it. I have to pay for my own gas, which is what I, unfortunately, spend the majority of my own money on. It's a good thing I have a job because I can rack up 400 miles per week."

Even more than gas, accidents required a large sum of money. Zach Wilson (11) learned this first hand.

Wearing a downcast expression, Wilson said, "At the beginning of the school year, I was excited to have finally passed my driver's test. One day after I got my license though, a deer jumped out in front of my truck. There was a decent amount of damage to the vehicle, and my parents were pretty upset."

Pennsylvania weather presented its own set of unique challenges such as black ice.

"In mid-November on Bonfire Shortcut, Megan and I hit a slippery section and slid off the road into a rut. Luckily, we missed the embankment and safely returned back onto the road with an added shot of adrenaline," Katie Aller (12) said.

Despite the money and troubles that cars caused, most teenagers truly appreciated the freedom and responsibility that came with having a driver's license; their parents, on the other hand, not so much.

While photographs often helped people remember certain events, others found physical scars left a more remarkable and memorable impact. Scars which left physical and visible impressions on a person's body brought back battle thoughts and often initiated storytelling. Scars surfaced on ankles, knees, and foreheads. More than often, they lasted for entire lifetimes. Wrestlers who endured daily beatings on all parts of their bodies often displayed more scars than other athletes. Shown with pride by their owners, these black, blue, and colorful patches became marks of toughness, durability, and persistence. In particular, four wrestlers came forth to show their battle wounds.

Bonfire ignites fall fundraising

story: e. knell (10)

To raise money for school clubs, the bonfire lit up the high school's lower parking lot on September 26. Also, various student organizations set up booths next to the track for the SADD-sponsored event.

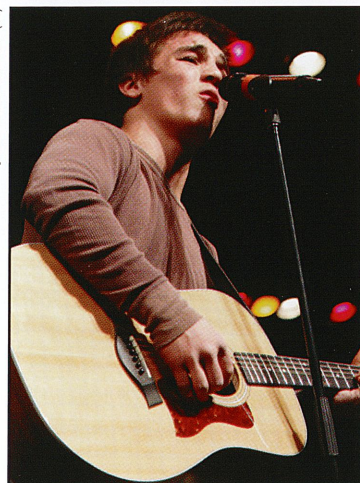

Taylor Caldwell (11) said, "I'm not an artist, but I did my best painting faces at the yearbook booth."

Families and students milled around the stands, stopping to purchase a candy apple or get their faces painted; a dunk tank and the opportunity to smash a car brought in money, as well. Younger kids, enthralled by the size of the fire, giggled at each other. The generosity of people who attended helped to sustain the clubs throughout the remainder of the year.

With the money earned at the bonfire, organizations such as Key Club, Student Council, and SADD successfully continued to impact the community and enrich student life.

trip tricks

Nearly every student participated in some fundraiser during their high school career. While the causes for the fundraising varied, students in music, sports, and clubs all used their creativity to come up with ways to raise money for trips, senior gifts, or just the organization itself.

The foreign language department set high standards for fundraising; international trips came with a hefty price tag. Students traveled to both China and Spain during the summer months. To help offset the costs, the young travelers sold candy bars, hoagies, frozen foods, and more. With some effort, fundraising decreased the cost by hundreds of dollars.

Success on the diamond relied on variables not usually witnessed by the casual baseball fan. In fact, preparation for the season started well before the spring flowers even started to bloom.

To prepare for the upcoming season, the players spent much of the winter months lifting in the school's weight room to improve their strength, running around campus to improve their velocity on the field, and executing drills that would better their fielding aspects of the game.

Projects and deadlines appeared fast approaching as weeks turned into days. Did teachers purposefully make everything due on the same day? Or did it just seem that way? Even when the due dates differed, various students still found difficulty and finishing projects punctually. In an attempt to finish on time, each student used his own method to complete it while trying to also minimize stress.

Students notice both sweet and sour hallway smells

A day at school utilized the brain and all five senses, but students often over used their nose, bombarded with new scents in every hallway. Entering the building, students first whiffed the sterile scent of antibacterial cleaner left over from the custodians the night before. Dragging their feet to first period, while passing the library, the smell of fresh brewed coffee and steaming cappuccinos from Mr. Swanson's makeshift coffee shop provided a daily temptation.

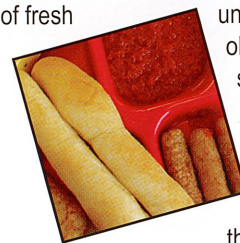

Nikole Kost (10) said, "I lost track of the money I've spent on coffee or hot chocolate. I can't resist fresh coffee, especially early in the morning when I'm still trying to wake up."

Right before lunch, the cooking and baking next to the science classes proved to bring on more cravings than the coffee. Saved by the bell, hungry teenagers ran to the lunch room as soon as they sensed the warm aroma of fresh cooked crazy dipper day drifting down the hallway.

"By the time lunch rolls around, I'm usually starving. And when it is crazy dipper day, you can bet I'll be running to the lunch room," Caleb Scutt (10) said.

After lunch, the class gym class locker room stench of unwashed clothes, old deodorant, and sweaty shoes induced gagging on a regular basis. Students rushed from the locker room to find fresher air. Walking through the 200 building hallways, students found better scents. Dominated by all female teachers, the English department left the smell of sweet perfume and tantalizing lotion. Finally, leaving the building and venturing to the bus parking lot, students left school with the smell of diesel fuel lingering in their nostrils and embedded in the fibers of their clothing.

that one hundred-ninety-four students gather to compete in multi-school construction competition

story: a. phillips (12)

Armed with a predetermined set of items, the drive to beat the other three schools in the competition, and their overflowing creative juices, 194 eager students spent a full day in the LGI and the library to construct a Rube Goldberg machine in the hopes of bringing the highly coveted title back to the home school on November 26, 2013.

Sponsored by the science, technology, and guidance departments, the competition's creator planned the day as a fun way to get students involved in STEM; science, technology, engineering, and mathematics.

Prior to the competition, most students knew nothing of Rube Goldberg or his infamous machines. An engineer turned cartoonist, Rube Goldberg became famous through his cartoons that turned simple everyday tasks, such as silencing an alarm clock, into a complicated network of operations to achieve the desired result. Come competition day though, students quickly mastered Goldberg's tricks of the trade in order to build their own ridiculously intricate machine. The goal of the day: to design a machine that would cover a plastic ping pong ball with a cup. Students came prepared, bringing all their own materials for the day.

The winning team consisted of Brent Kennedy (12), Andrew Yohe (12), Matt Dziadosz (12), Jesse Noble (12), Billy Johnson (12), and Luke Musco (12). The all boy, all senior team built the only contraption that successfully lowered the plastic cup over the ping pong ball without human interference. Their design exemplified Goldberg's original idea of a complicated looking contraption being inherently simple.

Jesse Noble (12) said, "Brent and Yohe were the brains behind the operation; simplicity was the key—couldn't get too fancy with it. But they'd still have failed without me and Billy. We took their idea and made it real, made it work. Brains are great but somebody had to be the brawn and take charge to produce our winning product."

What did you do today that you'll remember for the rest of your life?

Perhaps it was that one test in Mr. Bruno's class that you actually aced.

Or maybe it was when you left your bleeding soul on the field after marching your last competition show ever at Gateway High School, with your fluorescent green spot tucked under your uniform so near to your broken heart.

Still, maybe it was on September 25 for "See You at the Pole" when we gathered at the flagpole in the front circle to share and offer prayers for those who needed them.

What did you do to make your days memorable? How did you capture each and every moment?

athletes discuss most difficult preseason sport activities

The hot summer months brought relaxation and a break from school, for non-athletes at least. For the fall sports though, summer became the optimal time to begin training and preparing for upcoming sport seasons. Before these seasons began and official competitions occurred, most athletes already put in countless hours of preseason efforts. These preseason workouts made the difference between first and second place when championship season rolled around in the later months.

"The cross country team practiced Monday through Thursday in June. Even on Friday and Saturday when we didn't have practice, everyone ran to prepare for our first race in late August," Matthew Kish (11) said with a grimace.

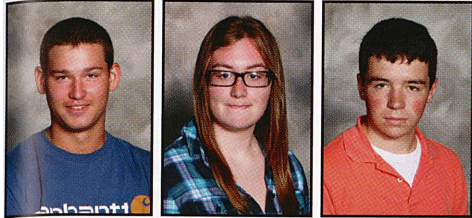

Ben Fiore (11) deemed summer soccer training a grueling couple of months.

Fiore said, "We had three weeks of mandatory twice a day practices."

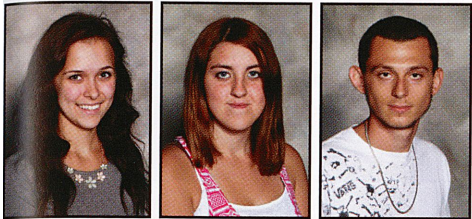

The lack of lazy summer days paid off when dedicated athletes completed the year with medals, new personal records, or a winning season.

Physical changes give students a chance to stand out

story: m. kiebler (12)

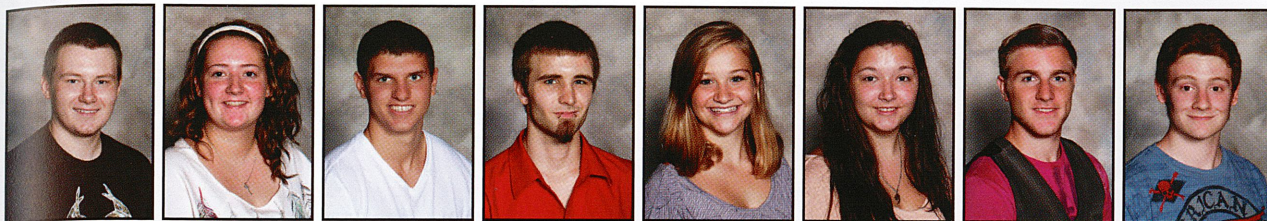

The amount of diversity displayed throughout the high school hallways increased each year. Not only did teenagers differ from one another due to backgrounds, beliefs, and interests, but also simply by appearance. Body modifications or alterations such as tattoos, piercings, or ever changing hair colors all presented ways that someone could change their appearance and stand out among the hundreds of students that inhabited the school. Alteration decisions stemmed from boredom, pure experimentation, or just curiosity over whether blondes or brunettes had more fun. The most obvious alteration a person made involved a box of dye or a trip to the hairdresser to change their hair from the usual color. More painful changes came from piercings and tattoos. Why suffer through the pain? Maybe they believed the added body adornments, like piercings, equaled more beauty.

Davon Thompkins (12) said, "I pierced my ears so I could look fly." The more permanent tattoos often came with deeper meanings and allowed for the commemoration of a special person, message, or memory. Whatever the reason, many options existed for people to modify their bodies and at the same time, create diversity.

Homecoming Pep Assembly

For the six nominated seniors, the fall Homecoming festivities became a huge deal. Nomination to Court brought on a lot of nerves, worries, and anxieties.

The pep assembly required each couple to perform in front of the entire student body.

"I'm not a person who lives for performing in front of the whole school. I was actually terrified at first," Ali Beck said.

Still, other members worried for different reasons.

Morgan Kiebler (12) said, "Waiting on the field was the worst part; it was so nerve-racking."

After much preparation, the six girls put on dance routines for the school in the gym, rode in convertibles for the Homecoming Parade, made it through the ceremony, and danced the night away in Gym B.

T'was the night before Friday, when all through the town, not a student stirred—except for the extreme fans anticipating the latest movie premiere. From the fiery suspense of The Hunger Games to the magical escape of The Hobbit, movie franchises sparked attention among teens all over the nation. Fans rushed to movie theaters at midnight to catch the first glimpse of the newest development in the film industry. Midnight premiere veteran Jordyn Palla (11) recounted her experiences at the chaotic outings.

"I knew it would be crazy and packed. I was literally right up against other people. Take this advice—make sure to go early; one time I had to sit on the stairs in the aisle because there were no seats left," Palla said.

Going to school exhausted the next day, but with the entire movie replaying in their heads, the entire experience somehow seemed worth the effort.

Curfews force teenagers to come home early

By law, until teenagers turned 18, they had to have their cars parked in the driveway by 11 o'clock. Still, some parents insisted on an even earlier curfew, worried about reckless drivers on the roads after dark. Others, on the other hand, bent the rules to allow their kids to attend midnight movie premieres and have a little more freedoms on the weekends.

Regardless, all young drivers looked forward to the day they turned 18 to legally drive during all hours of the night. From the legal junior license curfew to concerned parent curfews, high school students lacked the luxury of coming and going as they pleased.

food for thought

During the summer of 2013, two groups of students left the USA and headed abroad to Europe and Asia. One group of 45 students and teachers traveled to Spain, while the other smaller group of 29 ventured to China. Far from home, students faced challenges not only in communicating and navigating new areas, but also in finding food they liked.

Fried Rice

"In China, breakfast wasn't a thing; there was just nothing—nothing but fried rice at least. I'm willing to try anything, so I did. Still, it was so bland, I was sick of it by the end."

Traveling to foreign countries, besides presenting a life changing experience, included immense amounts of change. Depending on the destination, the differences between the travelers' hometowns seemed vast. From the city's inhabitants to the native language to the currency, even a week long trip seemed like an eternity due to the small amounts of similarities with the United States. Despite the differences, experiencing new cultures gave students a learning experience that provided them with a fresh perspective.

After long days at school, the cast of Tarzan quickly scarfed down snacks in the hallway before coming to the stage. While waiting for instruction, musical crew members dangled their feet off the edge of the stage as others practiced gorilla moves in the background. Those not rehearsing worked on making a dent in piles of homework or catching up on sleep. Although always a large commitment, musical cast members found themselves at home and happiest when on stage.

Cast digs deep to bring true love to stage

story: m. kiebler (12)

Before the cast of the fall drama Almost Maine performed, the audience knew nothing of the plot, with no hints from the title and only very brief descriptions from those that participated in it. After the show, the audience members recognized the play as a collection of humorous, yet heartfelt love stories.

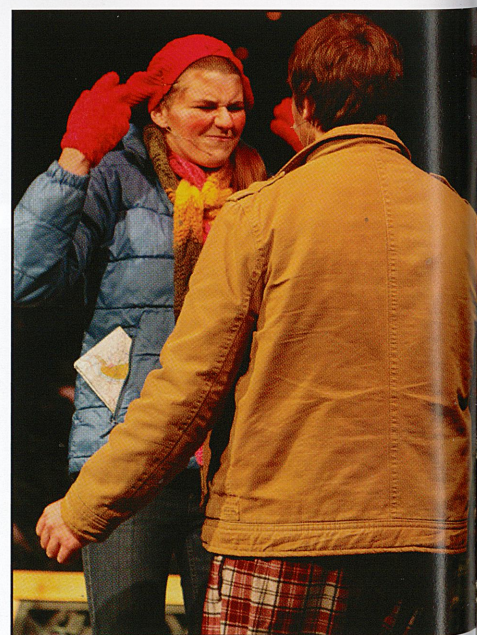

Not just the members of the crowd experienced those love relationships, but cast members built bonds, too. The actors and actresses of the show did their best to make sure that their characters exhibited true chemistry on stage.

Describing that on-stage chemistry, Casey Allen (10) said, "We all liked each other in real life, which made the fighting scenes between characters difficult to portray without laughing."

Despite anxieties cast members felt about portraying differing aspects of love, the show appeared real.

Amber Phillips (12) said, "I heard so many audience members say that the play was just so believable. I think the cast did a fantastic job with their excellent portrayals of real-life chemistry."

Set in Almost, Maine, Armond Brown's (12) character proposes to Rachael Minda's (12) character at the end of Act I. Brown said, "This scene was awkward, but I had a lot of fun performing in the play." Brown noted that he had a difficult time projecting his voice to the audience.

Students follow in family's footsteps and choose familiar trades

When asked to choose a path to take after high school, students often froze with fear at the thought. Such a big choice required family guidance, and with this guidance, students opted to continue the family tradition and follow in a relative's footsteps. Vo-tech students in particular decided to pursue the same path or trade as their elders. Individual reasons for choosing the trade varied, but all lead to the same end—an excellent career and job options for the future.

Graham said, "My mother's four-tiered, red velvet, beaded cakes inspired me to love cooking, particularly baking, and pursue culinary as my trade."

No matter the field, even outside vo-tech, family members played an instrumental role in shaping the ideals and interests that students adopted during and after high school.

The combination of business and technology gave older family members a chance to pass down their knowledge and skills to the younger generation.

Cheerleaders bring hope/encouragement at all times

story: t. caldwell (11)

Throughout the season, the cheerleaders always seemed to have smiles on their faces. On game day, whatever the sport, they wore their uniforms with pride as they prepared to pump up the crowd. Come game time, whatever the score, they kept smiling, yelling, and cheering. Rain or shine, warm or cold, indoors or outdoors, they cheered through every point, goal, or touchdown, regardless of how the scoreboard read. Difficult at times, the cheerleaders had to continually display their positive attitude and spirit.

Madisen Bellon (11) said, "I keep in high spirits by always thinking we will win. Even if it doesn't seem likely, I keep in that mindset. 'Just stay positive and have fun' is my motto when I cheer."

Maintaining hope in all circumstances, it certainly helped when the energetic student section encouraged and responded to their efforts.

Age old debate continues: Is it a sport?

story: e. knell(10)

Physical agility, daily practice, teamwork, attending camps, uniforms, and coaches: cheerleading had all of these. But did that make it a sport? The argument could last for hours, going back and forth between the two sides. Upbeat competition cheerleaders insisted it be recognized as a sport for they compete. Still, macho men deemed it just a sideline entertainment while the real athletes played, forgetting that some cheerleaders competed, too. High school cheerleaders, without the competition aspect, could easily be forgotten, though they pulled impressive stunts and danced sequences, too. Sport or not, cheerleaders certainly worked hard to improve their team and perfect routines to keep the crowd pumped.

Over the net

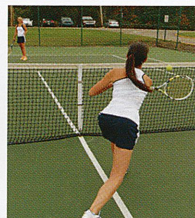

Due to the fast-paced nature of tennis games, players took the extra step to get the ball over the net. Although they could volley, spiking the ball over the net like a volleyball player remained illegal; players found other ways to get the ball to the other side. Players used various serves, volleys, and returns on their road to victory.

During a practice, Jake Murray (10) returns a lob to his teammate. "Playing tennis can be both relaxing and stressful. There's just so much pressure to do well all the time," Murray said. Because so many players graduated in 2013, Murray hoped to earn a starting position on the spring team.

Prior to a match against Norwin, Sierra Maher (12) practices her agility skills by bouncing the ball continually above her racquet. Maher said, "I really don't like playing the Knights because they don't have good sportsmanship." Maher further said, "I love playing Latrobe because their girls are so nice."

Players discuss how they apply tennis skills to aspects of life

story: e. rosensteel (12)

Especially in the summertime, just for fun, tennis players stood out from the group with mad talents on the courts. Showing off their skills, they could actually connect the racquet with the ball and return the serve without sending it flying high into the neighbor's yard. However, the skills they gained from their sport extended to other areas of their lives, even off the court. Tennis taught the players timing, patience, and the ability to work together as a team.

"My family actually has a tennis court in our back yard. It's a great way for all of us to better our game and stay in shape at home."

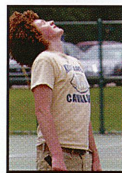

Alex Ferraccio (10)

"Playing tennis helps me to relieve stress because when I get out there on the court, I get to take out my frustrations on the ball and forget about everything else."

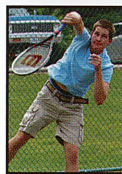

Lily Gongaware (10)

Scissors, staplers, glitter, glue sticks, crayons, or construction paper—anything involved in crafting became a big hit. The new Life Skills room in the 100 building quickly became a headquarters for everything artsy. The students made creative projects throughout all the seasons. Such projects included bird feeders with pinecones and black bats for Halloween. Crafting helped students express their creativity and gave a sense of accomplishment for all upon the completion of each finished product.

Buddy Katie Perroz (10) said, "The kids really like to interact with the projector and screen to learn. It makes learning fun." The kids loved trying to figure out what the picture would become.

no girls' golf?

Former team member dishes on district decision to eliminate girls' golf team

story: t. caldwel (11)

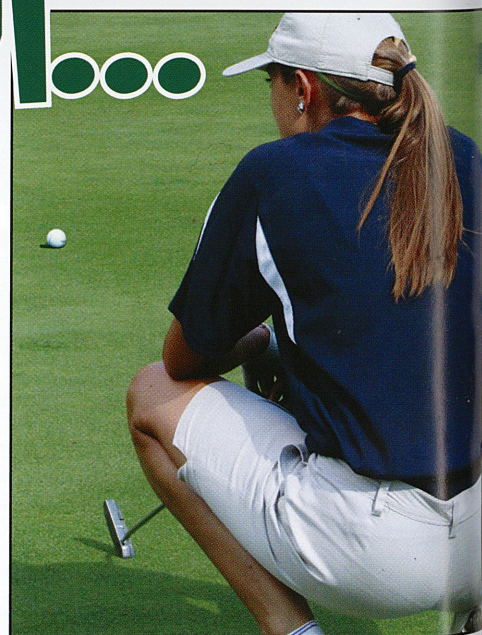

The number of golfers steadily declined from 30 million in 2000, to 26 million people in 2008. Girls' golf suffered the consequences of this decline when, for the first time, they could not put together a team. The four seniors who comprised the core of the last year's team graduated, leaving Jordyn Palla (11) as the only returning player. Palla still practiced golf as a part of the boys' team, but her participation in matches depended on whether or not the opposing school brought a girls' golf team.

Palla said, "I wasn't sure at first about playing with the boys, but Mr.

Stasko kept encouraging me and I wanted to golf. I was nervous at first playing with the boys, but they were all really accepting of me."

Palla participated in two of the boys' matches, and hoped for the return of a girls' team to allow for more competition, as well as more company.

"I really look forward to possibly being able to play with some girls next year. As awesome as all the guys were, it's not the same without other girls' company. Still, as long as I was able to golf, I was happy to have the chance and definitely willing to do it," Palla said.

Down and Dirty

Surprisingly, on the eighth hole at the Vandergrift golf course against the Gateway Jators, Paul Zanotti (12) unearths some worms. "This was my worst hole of the year. I couldn't get out of the fescue," Zanotti said. The team won the match by four strokes.

Putting Practices

Before a match, Brandon Stephens (9) practices his putting skills. "Mr. Stasko was a really laid-back coach. We had a whole lot of fun at every practice," Stephens said. The team practiced several times a week to better their competition skills.

Look at her putt

To make par at the match against Penn Hills, Jordyn Palla (11) eyes up her putt on the first hole. Palla said, "Putting is my worst stroke. It's the worst part of my game. I prefer chipping." Palla became the first girl ever to golf on the boys' team.

"The first time I went golfing, I sent the club further than the ball."

Choir members' voices travel up/down east coast

story: m. kiebler (12)

For the members of chorus, the annual choir trip combined a love of singing and a love of traveling. Each year, Mrs. Hampshire (fac.) traveled with members of her various choirs (from sophomores to seniors) to different competitions out of state to show off their hard work, while still having some fun bonding time as a group.

The competition destinations went through a three year cycle, enabling members to venture to all locations by the time graduation arrived. From Washington D.C., to Virginia Beach, and New York City, the choir trips gave students opportunities to explore the East Coast.

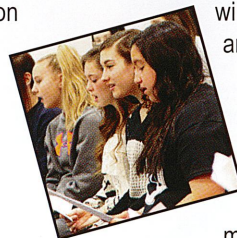

A member of Women's Choir for the past two years, Tory Jackson (12) said, "I have gone on two trips since my sophomore year. The first was Washington D.C. and the second was Virginia Beach. Out of the two, I enjoyed Virginia Beach more because I love the beach, and it was more exciting than seeing museums and buildings in D.C. No matter where the trip is, the amount of walking you do is crazy, though. When Mrs. Hampshire says to bring walking shoes, she isn't kidding. I am also going on the trip to New York this year, but I'm not sure how much I will like it because I am not a city person."

The trips cost students large sums of money, but weekly payment plans made it easy to stay on track. Fundraisers such as selling chocolate bars, discount punch cards for various restaurants, or cookie dough enabled choir members to make profit and lessen the financial burden on students' shoulders. No matter how much the trips cost, the excursions provided an opportunity for the students to perform in front of national adjudicators, and their comments helped to better each choir.

Maddy Costanza (12) sang the National Anthem that evening.

Ice, bandages, peroxide, or water bottles—athletic trainers dealt with a lot of varied requests. From simply putting bandages on scrapes to releasing tight muscles and traveling to the late night game, the trainers put up with lots to get the job done.

Wrestling trainers cleaned mystery substances off of the mats, wrapped oozing infectious cuts, and stopped bloody noses.

Boys' soccer trainers faced the adverse effects of concussions, and they also tolerated hour-long loud bus rides.

Despite taking care of unique stomach churning moments, the trainers gained pleasure and reward in knowing that they helped athletes, regardless of the situation. When injured, athletes immediately looked to their trainers for help.

Swimmers overcome tough opponents

story: T. Caldwell (11)

The swim team cherished every victory because of the obstacles they overcame to earn them. In their AAA division, each opposing team brought skill and drive to the pool, making victory a challenge.

Jordyn Palla (11) said, "There are teams who have two or three times as many swimmers as we do. Since there are so many, it means there is way more of a chance that they find some really talented athletes."

Teams like Penn Trafford, Franklin Regional, Latrobe, and Hempfield challenged the swim team the most. The well known speed of these opposing swimmers provided for extremely competitive meets.

Palla said, "It is definitely harder to hold our own against those teams. Still, knowing we had to meet each challenge, we had to step it up in practice each week. And we did!"

On Thursday, December 11, 2013, Olivia Albert (9) interviews a student from the Upper Elementary School. Albert said, "It was a bit intimidating knowing that my every move would be broadcast all over the community. I got used to it after awhile, though." In addition to anchoring, Albert rang the bell at K-mart.

For as long as snow has fallen from the skies, and when enough of that white fluffy stuff covered the earth, both young and old continued to drop all inhibitions and fall to the ground to spread their limbs and make a snow angel.

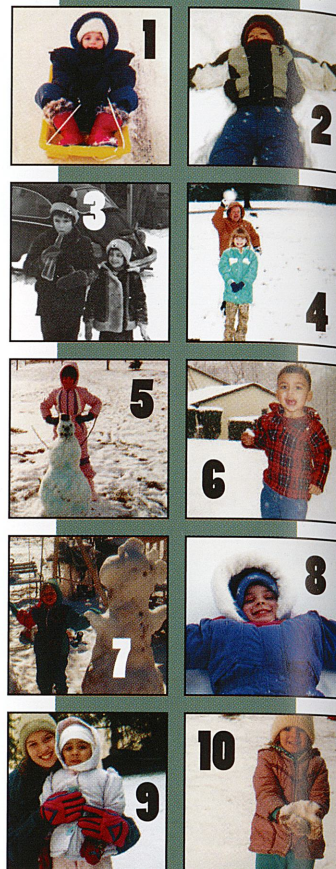

Amber Phillips (12) said, "There's just something special about doing that horizontal jumping-jack on the ground and getting up to see your temporary imprint in the crystals. You just have to do it every year! It somehow makes winter a bit more tolerable."

Time to reflect

Seated near the front of the bus to 7-Springs, Drake Strong (9) talks to Connor Steuernagel (9) to pass the time. Strong said, "The bus ride to 7-Springs is always worse than the ride home because everyone's all excited to hit the slopes. On a typical Thursday evening trip, the riders didn't return back to school until 11:15 PM."

A yearly weather event in western PA, everyone knows that come October, you just never know when the next snowstorm will arrive. For many longtime residents, those six-sided crystals gathered to provided the time to ride sleds, build snowmen, make snow angels, or just give Mom and Dad a photo opportunity.

Splitting the hillside, the Polar Express Lift carries avid skiers to the top of the mountain. Dutch Shaffer (12) said, "Of all the trails at 7-Springs, I like Boulder the best. It's not the most challenging slope there, but it's different than all the others." Shaffer snow boarded at least once a week all winter long.

Art adorns
building's walls

story: t. caldwell (11)

Over the past few years, students and faculty worked ardently to provide a display of art history in the 400 building. Three wall murals represented pivotal events in America's history: the Surrender at Appomattox and Monitor, the Raising of the Flag at Iwo Jima, and Washington Crossing the Delaware—with more in the works.

A main visionary of the projects, Mr. Smith (fac.) said, "We come up with one idea per year which student artists then bring to life."

However, these murals did more than decorate the walls; they incorporated technology, making them educational and interactive, as well. From pressing a button to play an informative voice recording to touching the wall to make a video play, the brains behind the designs grew more ambitious each year.

"We have gotten more complex with our designs. The most recent, with its activation upon touch, took almost the whole school year to complete. It took a lot of programming with some electronics and assembling, as well," Mr. DeSantis (fac.) said.

mural maker

Right after she penciled the outline, Michelle Hollinger (12) paints The Ghandi Salt March as a mural in the 400 wing. Hollinger said, "The murals in the 400 building bring some personality to an otherwise boring hallway." Each year, the social studies department finds a student artist to create a new picture.

let's review that

With her period DE class, Mrs. Eichner (fac.) prepares a review lesson on a unit that covers the first four U.S. Presidents. Her former student, Zhane Hurst (10) said, "Mrs. Eichner was a really good teacher. She was so good at finding ways to explain the lessons so that everyone understood." Mrs. Eichner taught six classes of US History I.

Focused on the lesson, April Ayers (9) and Nick Balant (9) learn about the War of 1812 in their U.S. History I class with Mr. Smith (fac.). Ayers said, "I like using the computers in Mr. Smith's class, but sometimes it takes forever to just log on." Outside of school, Ayers played the trumpet in the marching band and performed in the winterguard's show entitled All About the Band.

COM on Weekend

Friday night delight overpowers Monday morning blues

story: m. kiebler (12)

Monday through Thursday, faces in the hallway looked glum, tired, and bored. On Friday, however, smiles came out and shined bright. Every student seemed a little happier, walking with a spring in their step. With the weekend basically upon them, 2:44 PM on Friday never arrived soon enough for students.

The fluster to finalize Friday night plans ran through everyone's minds as the day wore on.

During the fall, cookouts in the parking lot above Davis Field, followed by loud cheering and chanting, characterized typical Friday nights. Themed game nights had fans leaving their houses for the game dressed in all pink, a Halloween costume in September, and even an array of red, white, and blue. The camaraderie of the cheering masses and the pride of singing the alma mater with peers sent hundreds of students to the games each week.

For some, Friday nights grew increasingly more monotonous during the cold winters. Creative minds spent the Friday school day planning indoor activities for the weekend.

"A few times I have gone to heat yoga at YogaFlow with girls from the cross country team. It's a seventy-five minute class, and then we go out for frozen yogurt after," Amber Bumbaugh (9) said.

Local theaters, ice rinks, and bowling alleys attracted a larger, younger crowd in the winter months.

Michael Luciano (12) said, "This Friday, I'm going bowling with some friends. It only costs one dollar per game, so why not go? Other Fridays, I just hang out with friends or occasionally go snow boarding."

Regardless of the season, students eagerly awaited every Friday night.

Some words naturally elicited a dramatic response. Whether a smile, frown, or grimace, students brought their game faces for a whole new take on reaction pictures.

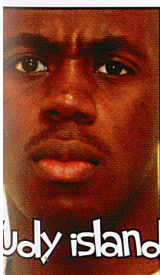

With senior paper season coming to a close, seniors never wanted to hear the word research again. After an entire nine weeks dedicated to perfecting one paper, most never wanted to write any paper again either. Ali Beck (12) showed her distaste for research, donning a steely-eyed glare in her picture.

Beck said, "At this point, I just want to be done with my paper. It's been an exhausting nine weeks in English class."

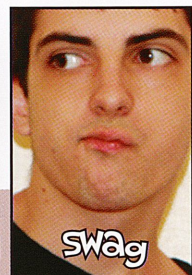

Others' faces showed similar overly dramatized reactions, with many turning out better than first expected.

Davon Thompkins (12) said, "When they said my word was adorable, I had my doubts about pulling it off. But when I saw the picture, even I was impressed with myself."

Partners dish on relationship games that hurt most

In high school, relationships seemed like they would last forever. However, these bonds often became a controlling aspect over every aspect in everyday life. Sometimes, one person in the relationship, longing for control, played mind games on the other. For all the people on the receiving end of the game, it ended in pain, tears, and confusion.

"I was talking to a guy for about a year. Unknown to me though, this whole time, he was talking to my best friend, too. I couldn't believe it when I found out," Casey Allen (10) said.

Out of the blue break ups left the one being dumped blindsided and dumbfounded.

Abby Schiebel (10) said, "My ex-boyfriend would break plans with me all the time, but when I asked him if everything was okay, he'd always say it was and come up with some excuse. When he broke up with me a week later though, I knew he had been lying. Honestly, I really just don't understand guys."

Not all boys played the games though. Gillian Debick (10) said, "Wyatt is my best friend and has been since 7th grade. He's honest and straightforward, and I like that."

a must-o

Animation proves vital to achieve on stage success

story: m. kiebler (12)

Historically, energetic people captured audiences best on stage. The more dynamics that they brought to their characters, the better their performances. These actors used all types of different strategies to help bring their characters to life when they stepped on the stage.

Ryan Gress (10) got into his character for the 2013 fall drama, Almost Maine, quite easily. His actual girlfriend, Tiffany Cupec (12) played the love interest in his scene, making the on-stage flirtation natural.

"Things just naturally happened that way. I was already so excited, and needless to say, no acting was necessary," said Gress.

For others, the cast pairing did not work out so easily, and the cast used various techniques ranging from the simple to the very specific and quirky. Kyle Orris (10) laughed when he recalled what he and Zach Myszczo (12) did before performing this fall.

"I would just clear my head and think about what I needed to do. Then, I tried to develop some fun energy. To help with this, Zach and I would sing together. It was cute and very helpful," Orris said.

The cast portrayed their characters in unique ways, finding their own effective ways to achieve animation.

Three lunch meals reign supreme story: m. kieber (12)

If the calendar reads mashed potato bowl, crazy dipper day, or general tso's chicken on the lunch menu, take care in the hallways when the lunch bell rings. As kids ran through the halls with the hope of being the first one in line to receive their food, it became obvious that fear of school lunches and cafeteria "mystery meat" no longer existed. Year after year, three favorites remained top sellers.

krazy dipper day

"Krazy dippers are like spoonfuls of delight in every bite. I look forward to it every week. The best part of the meal is the bread sticks."

Lindsey Hessom (10)

Knapp said, "Mrs. Novak requires that I wear the ugly cap in class because apparently I have the longest hair of any of the other boys. I just don't see that." The class also made chocolate chip cookies, sugar cookies, Reese's peanut butter tassies, and a whole lot of muffins.

boys discuss most pivotal plays of season

Sometimes, a single play can shape the whole direction of a game. Five members of the pitch recall those moments that not only turned a game around, but lifted the spirits of the team.

"As a team, we wanted to make the playoffs, stay healthy throughout the entire season, and get closer each game."

Battling for the ball, Tom Bruno (12) and Matt Cecchetti (12) attempt to steal the ball from their Connellsville opponent. Bruno said, "The Connellsville players always prove to be worthy opponents." Bruno won the ball and passed it to Matt Dziadosz (12) on the play.

To retrieve the ball for her team, Rachel Winesky (11) battles two Franklin Regional players. "As it turned out, this game became unimportant after losing to Latrobe in the previous game. If we had beaten Latrobe, we would have made the playoffs," Winesky said. She had played soccer since the young age of four.

connellsville crushing

Under the bright lights at Davis Field, Stacey Sikora (12) steals the ball from a Connellsville defensive end. We were really on a roll against the Falcons this year. "You could say that we punished them pretty bad," Sikora said. The Falcons scored only one goal against the home team versus the 13 scored against the Falcons.

In sports, amazing feats happened at all times, no matter what the clock or scoreboard read. Breathtaking shots in soccer came in the first seconds during a frantic sprint and at the end of a shootout. Unbelievable goals that soared right past the goalkeeper and straight into the sweet spot of the net set the crowd ablaze.

"In a game against Hempfield, Tyler Young took a corner kick. I headed the ball back to him, and then he headed it in the goal. It gave us momentum, and we ended up winning the game 3-0," Nate Kiebler (12) said.

Brittany Palla (10) said, "Leanna Barkley had a nice game winning free kick. It went right past the goalie."

Both phenomenal goals sent the crowd into hysterics and made the season even more worthwhile.

Bible Club members follow in holy footsteps

story: a. phillips (12)

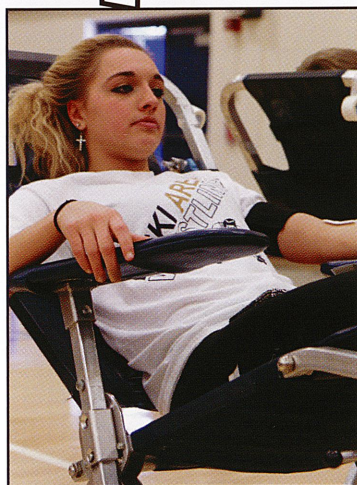

Bible Club, much like its name suggests, existed to promote the messages of Jesus Christ and God. The club spread awareness by holding daily morning prayer in the atrium, in addition to more special events like See You at the Pole. The event welcomed all students and teachers, not just club members, to pray together at the flag pole under the sun's morning rays.

Frank Longo (12) said, "When we get together to pray, we pray about pretty much anything. Typically, we'll pray about teachers and students, but anything is open for prayer."

In addition to spreading the word about Jesus and praying together, the group strived to lift the spirits of its members. From always offering a supportive hand, to walking in the footsteps of Christ in their daily lives, members also met after school for communal food-filled gatherings in God's name.

His dad, Dan, said, "I actually bought the car in New Castle from a gentleman who hauled it up from Texas. We enter it into car shows once or twice every year." The McClelland's car only had 43,000 miles on it, and they restored it to its original shape.

Held on September 25, twins Danika and Naudia Johnson (9) gather with other students and faculty members to offer thanks to God at See You at the Pole. "We try to attend every morning at 7:00 in the atrium to offer prayers for those who need them," said Johnson. See You at the Pole occurred on the fourth Wednesday of every September.

story: a. phillips (12)

With movies like Lassie, Where the Red Fern Grows, and Old Yeller, dogs have appeared in blockbuster films for over 60 years and earned the title of "man's best friend." However, with Disney's huge blockbuster The Lion King and the popular internet meme known as Grumpy Cat, the popularity of cats stood their feline ground. Certainly, crazy cat fans and die hard dog lovers have debated which species reigned superior.

Despite member favoritism, Active for Animals strived to ensure that all shelter pets had sufficient food, as well as extra treats for the holiday season. The club set up a Christmas tree in a hallway with an ornament for each needy animal, allowing students to donate something special for a fine, furry friend.

Modern day math students rely on technology for test-taking

story: a. phillips (12)

However nerdy, calculus students confirmed just how much they loved their calculators. When test time came, every calculation needed calculator confirmation, even two plus two. Modern calculators went far beyond just simple math, though, and helped students recall what the graph of each equation looked like. Much like a parent, students relied on their calculators for support in their time of need. Students forced to test without their calculator could expect exponential nightmares.

Pumped up students flooded Twitter with smack-talking tweets and packed the gym in a sea of white-out shirts. With so many fans to support both the home and away teams, it had to be the Burrell wrestling match. As one of the most anticipated matches of the year, Burrell brought their best for the face off, looking to gain an upset in the rivalry's history. Excited fans went so far as to wear old wrestling singlets to cheer on the teams. Burrell went home—again defeated—failing to achieve their upset.

Runners compete in every climate condition

story: m. kiebler (12)

While other sports cancelled because of tremendous rain, snow, or freezing temperatures, the cross country runners still plugged on outside, logging countless miles in various adverse conditions. While their training began in the hot days of June and continued through the humidity of July and August, the end of the season provided completely different situations for racing and workouts.

The team competed in the Red, White, and Blue Invitational in early September where the sun beat down and sweat poured from their faces. By the end of the season, the weather at Tri-State Championships left the runners soaking wet, freezing cold, and covered in mud from their toes to their faces. Once, just for practice, seven runners traveled to a nearby snow covered track to complete a four and one-half mile workout in wind and ice.

Megan Aller (10) said, "Nobody was allowed to stay after school, so we went to Burrell to get our workout in."

The extreme weather conditions truly acclimated the athletes for any situation. Let it snow; let it snow; let it snow.

Juniors react to newly required Keystone tests

story: e. knell (10)

The Webster Dictionary defined keystone as, "the wedge-shaped piece at the summit of an arch, regarded as holding the other pieces in place." However, for PA students, the word became synonymous with the newly implemented standardized tests. The state required students to test proficient in Algebra I, Biology, and English. Motivation to pass stemmed from the desire to take the test only one time, score proficient, and never have to take it again. Graduation proved another good motivator, for state officials mandated proficiency by senior year to graduate high school.

A number of students commented that the tests simply required the memorization of too much material. Juniors who took biology their freshman year stored all knowledge of ecosystems and cell structures somewhere far in the back of their brains, along with other supposedly useless information like their multiplication tables and how to read an analog clock. However, students managed to get by with review packets online, extra Study Island practice, or by directly asking teachers for help.

A few students appreciated the testing for giving them opportunity to show their smarts, as they whizzed through the multiple choice and open-ended questions of each subject's test. For those who hated all test-taking, standardized or otherwise, Keystone Week became the perfect time to contemplate the consequences of choosing B for every answer. Thankfully, as testing scores revealed, students chose more than just B and pulled through with scores of proficient and advanced; the high school ranked at the top of the county.

The light bulb symbolized a great idea, and with the amount of lights in the school auditorium, the genius practically beamed out. Those privy to the behind-the-scenes lighting understood its importance to the plays and musicals. Stage crew used different colors on the light board, such as amber, blue, gold, and basic white to create different moods. In addition to changing the color of the lights, the crew created plenty of other ways to influence the scene and mood. With colorful props accentuated by professional lighting, on-stage scenes came to life.

"We use the lights to make sure the audience is focusing on certain things; they're more likely to notice something important if it's under a bright spotlight," Lauren Bono (12) said.

Motion sickness overcomes bus riders

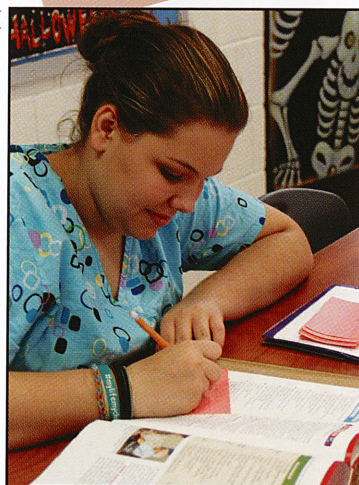

story: a. phillips (12)

To call it a commute like no other would be accurate. In classic January below freezing temperatures, the AM vo-tech students boarded the bus to return to the high school, expecting just another ordinary bus ride. Little did they know, Will Cousins (12) just suffered through an entire morning with winter's typical flu. The motion of the speeding bus did little to calm his stomach. Unable to contain himself any longer, Will "tossed his Christmas cookies" all over the bus floor.

Recounting the story, Ethan Nauyokas (12) said, "Once Will threw up, it was all downhill from there. Everybody knows a person who pukes at the smell and sight of someone else's puke. Well, on the tech bus that day, there were at least five. By the time we reached the school, it was a mess."

Despite the trauma of the incident at the time, those there for that fateful bus ride looked back and laughed at the day's events.

High school kids gained a reputation for sleeping until noon. Begging, pleading, and honest-to-goodness threats to turn the bedroom lights on did nothing to budge teenagers from their cozy beds. However, morning vo-tech kids did not have the luxury of slow wake up. Heading to tech first thing in the morning, the lack of sleep posed certain dangers.

Attending tech in the afternoon proved to have its own drawbacks, too. While the tech kids rode back to the high school on the buses, other students benefited from the various pep assemblies held in Gym A at the end of the day.

Certainly, the choice to attend tech had its benefits. However, regardless of the hour, it also had its share of negative aspects.

The choice to play basketball proved to become the right choice for junior basketball players Matthew Bisceglia (11), Bernard Rottschaefer (11), and Mike Simmons (11). While young players often stopped at the backyard hoops level—which included skinned knees, embarrassment, and losing to mom—these three players pursued the sport and graduated to the varsity court. The players trained in their off seasons, practicing their ball control, as well as increasing their agility and overall fitness levels. Come winter, though, the repetitive sound of basketballs hitting the wooden gym floor served as the first sign that the official time to begin training had arrived. Bisceglia attributed his drive in the game to the offensive aspects and the perks of playing the sport.

Bisceglia said, "My favorite aspect is scoring. You can't win the game without it. Plus, I love the glory and the girls."

On the other hand, Rottschaefer found his calling on the defensive side. Rottschaefer said, "For me, defense is where I love to play. I just like to shut people down."

Physical education curriculum offers something for everyone

story: m. kiebler (12)

Concerning favorite classes, students often recognized gym class. Gym provided a stress relieving forty-four minute period that differed from the monotony of sitting at a desk completing worksheets. Beside the stereotypical gym classes, students picked from numerous elective gym classes. Choosing between Dancercise, Lifetime Sports, Fit for Life, Strength Training, Advanced Fitness, and Advanced Aquatics, all desirable alternatives to regular gym, left gym lovers with a tough decision.

A member of Lifetime Sports, Jordyn Palla (11) said, "Elective gym is so much better than regular gym. Playing with guys makes the games so much more fun, and everyone tries their best instead of just standing around."

Elective gym classes enabled boys and girls to participate in sports or games together, unlike the regular segregated rotational gym classes. They also gave students the chance to have more than one gym class, for they met every day for half a year instead of meeting all year. Each class proved to have its own unique pros. Dancercise planned flash mobs and performed at the end of the semester for anyone with a free period.

Advanced Aquatics strengthened swimming skills, while qualifying students to be lifeguards without the hefty price of a regular lifeguard certification course. Others, like Lifetime Sports and Fit for Life, gave students the opportunity to try activities regular classes do not do.

"What I love is that you get to play games like Pickleball, ping pong, and corn hole that most classes don't get the opportunity to try. They're less strenuous and more fun," Haylie Daugherty (12) said.

Secret plays and runs prove to become a consistent way to score much needed points for the girls' basketball team. When in doubt, the team looked to Roger and Larry for assistance.

"One play that the team uses is called a Larry. It is designed for a fast break on the left side of the court to get a wide open three-point shot."
Anyssa Sanchez (12)

"The play that works the best is when we line up in a single-file line. The girl taking the ball out-hits it and we scatter. We almost always get a shot off of that play."
Lindsey Hessom (10)

"Larry is used when the other team has a foul shot. Our objective is to get the ball as fast as we can to Anyssa Sanchez so we can score."

On the home court against the Hempfield Spartans, Emily Cieslinski (9) defends the pass from one of her opponents. Cieslinski said, "You have to be aggressive on the court because if you're too timid, the other team will just run over you." Cieslinski recognized Kevin Durant from Ohio State as her favorite player.

about height

Channing James (11) - 6'5" Danika Johnson (9) - 5'10" Naudia Johnson (9) - 5'10" Emily Gregory (9) - 5'8"

In the game of basketball, tallness became an advantage rather than an embarrassment. Most girls with abnormal height headed to the basketball court when choosing a sport to play. Long legs led to covering the court quicker, reaching above opponents' heads to catch passes, and easily reaching the hoop when trying to score. Players with recognizable height gained immediate attention from the other team, even before the game began. The tallest girl tended to be marked as 'a force to be reckoned with' and given special attention. On the other hand, as the short girl, people often immediately overlooked possible playing abilities. Whether tall or short, the girls made the best of height's advantages and disadvantages.

Varsity team disbanded due to lack of upperclassmen

story: t. caldwell (11)

As the Sochi Winter Olympics captivated millions of viewers with extreme displays of athleticism, western PA Penguin fans tuned in to hockey. While Olympic hockey remained on the forefront of worldwide sports, the high school hockey team suffered through their season as the coaches decided to disband the varsity team. With successful records over the previous years, the low number of returning varsity players served as a disappointing surprise.

RJ Bouch (11) said, "It was a let down that the varsity team got cut. Having everyone on the same team did keep the skill level together, though."

After discussing the membership and age dilemma, the hockey coaches remained hopeful that a varsity team would return for the 2014-2015 school year.

Ready to head up ice, Zach McClarnon (10) passes the puck to Nick Wallace (9) in a heated game against Norwin. McClarnon said, "Norwin's team always puts up a challenge for us. They tend to get under our skin most of the time." McClarnon and the home team ended up tying the Knights at the end of regulation with five goals each.

Just face it

Eager for the faceoff, Nick Hurley (9) focuses in on the dropped puck. Hurley said, "To win a faceoff, you have to get as low to the ice as possible. It gives you more leverage to capture the puck." In the game against the Armstrong River Hawks, Hurley won eight face offs.

Up against the Armstrong River Hawks, goalie Alex Ferraro (9) adamantly guards the net. Ferraro said, "Being a goalie, you have to be prepared to get hit, sacrifice your body, and do whatever it takes to keep the puck out of the net." Ferraro recognized Henrik Lundqvist from Sweden as his favorite goalie.

At the home game against Armstrong, Nick Wallace (9) crashes the net for a goal. "My go-to move to get around a defenseman is called a toe drag. You pull the puck behind you so your opponent can't get it." In the shut out win against the River Hawks, Wallace scored two of the six goals.

Players discuss their penalty box views

boxed out

Overly aggressive teams that take penalties like Zachary McClarnon's (10) dealt with penalty boxes as busy as Ellis Island in the 1800's. However, playing that way often detrimentally affected a team's record. Whenever a player got sent to the penalty box for any amount of time, the rest of the team compensated by playing more defensively. In the majority of cases, this prohibited the team from scoring.

To prevent concussions, in the past couple of years regulators set standards that issued additional penalties to certain infractions. Still, although checking and rough play remained integral parts of hockey, the players who refrained from dangerous actions came out on top.

Talents run deep

Mel Brooks once wrote, "When you got it, flaunt it." Talented students happily obliged and showed off their gifts. Whether in the talent show, at Dancing with the Teachers, or just on stage for a chorus or band concert, the musically gifted loved performing for a crowd. Keeping the beat, matching pitch, and sight reading music became second nature.

Artists unveil inspirations/

projects

story: e. knell (10)

To outsiders, art projects seemed to appear as random items, scenes, or moments in time. To the artists who created them, however, each piece possessed a meaning deeper than its physical appearance. The origins for the seemingly random projects came from photographs and love for a color. No matter the origin of the inspirations, these students turned their visions into real art. From clay sculptures, to shockingly lifelike acrylic paintings, to plain old pencil sketches, the artists developed pride in their work.

Teenagers feared picking up their iPhone after an accidental drop and seeing criss-crossing cracks. Dropping their phones caused hearts to skip a beat and sentences to end midway through. No matter the appeal of a naked iPhone, students preferred to pay now for the safety of an Otterbox case rather than pay double to fix the phone later. A popular choice, Otterboxes adorned teenagers' phones with cases ranging from big and bulky to compact and colorful.

Thanks to the Spanish department, on October 10, to celebrate el Día de la Raza (Day of the Race), members of the various Spanish classes learned salsa steps from Marvin Silva, a professional instructor.

As an officer of Spanish Club, Alexandra Clark (12) took charge of contacting the teacher to plan the day. AP Spanish then spent a few days creating paper chains, tissue paper flowers, and Spanish signs to decorate the atrium. The bright decorations and fast-paced music got dozens in the mood to move. Passers by witnessed easy smiles and quick feet at the seventh and eighth period event held in front of the main office.

Taylor Caldwell (11) described the event as, "muy divertido," or very fun. She specifically recognized Austin Linder (12) as an excellent dancer with smooth flowing hips, just like Shakira.

Mrs. Varano (fac.) said, "Salsa in the atrium has been around for lots and lots of years, probably more than 10. Hopefully the tradition will continue for many years to come."

With the help of the enthusiastic instructor, even those with little to no skill or rhythm danced with their partners for an enlightening afternoon of Spanish culture.

Staff directs readers to notice certain thematic elements

From its conception, Off the Edge naturally lent itself to visual stimulation. Stemming from the cover, the theme copy bled off the lower right margin into an abyss of the imagination. Additionally, the staff varnished a narrow vertical strip on the front and ghosted a black and white vertical strip collection of photos on the back as a foreshadowing of elements to come. Co-Editors Kayla Wadsworth (12) and Amber Phillips (12) implemented two final thematic elements: a 15 degree tilt applied to certain elements and copy that featured overlapping (edge defying) regions of color because of their differing opacities.

The first pages of the book introduced the funky theme. The staff hoped the overly large headings with randomly capitalized letters would immediately draw readers' attention into an "edgy" publication. The vertical strip that appeared on the cover became an iconic element that the staff placed on every spread; it varied in color, placement, and topic throughout the book. Additionally, while secrets revealed

colored headings drew attention, the designers hoped that subtle touches of black and white pictures would ground the spreads.

To improve coverage, the folio on each spread offered students' opinions in threes, all while implementing theme elements in their design.

Leaking pictures off the edge of one page and onto the next became one of the more challenging aspects of the book. On many spreads, the upper right picture bleeds off the page and finishes on the next. On that note, the staff also did its best to both carry over and even preview ALL elements that bled off horizontally--to emphasize the "edge" of the pages.

The staff broke physical barriers in this Campus, completely changing the subdivisions of the book. Rather than six stereotypical sections, the staff divided Off the Edge into four sections, one for each letter of the word "Edge."

"We hope that revealing our intentions for the book will allow everyone to share in our true vision for off the eDge," Campus Co-Editor-in-Chief Amber Phillips said.

The school year started one week later to complete the new primary school in North Washington. Additionally, nobody expected a day off in October for a community water ban.

Enter a winter like no other. Like the characters in Disney's recent blockbuster movie Frozen, western PA residents easily related to the perils of dangerous temperatures and deep snow. Relentless cold weather impacted attendance and functions at the school with a total of 11 delays and cancellations, just from January 6th to February 18th.

Math teacher Mr. Fantaski (fac.) said, "My favorite season has always been winter. That hasn't changed. Still, this one was a doozie. We had a lot of problems making our deadlines because we lost so much time."

At first, so many welcomed those extra two hours to sleep in. Eventually though, the vast majority of the high school just craved a sense of normalcy in the schedule and a last day before June 17.

Guess what? We didn't stop there.

When the girls' golf team disbanded, Jordyn Palla (11) didn't quit. She just joined the boys' team.

Who also would have thought we would cross an ocean to learn? Last summer, 38 students visited Spain and 23 went to China, with 23 more set to travel to Spain and France in the summer of 2014.

And the girls' volleyball team didn't play the "Name Game" to break the ice with new players. The nine seniors surprised their teammates by dressing up as a Swedish Zumba Team instead.

In these ways and so many others, we have surpassed the expected.

high school myths frighten some underclassmen

Books, TV shows, songs, and movies all served as guidance for the transition from middle school to high school. In media outlets, authors and directors portrayed high school as a jungle riddled with maze-like hallways, filled with seniors who acted like rude gorillas. This representation frightened the upcoming freshman classes.

Sara Masters (9) said, "I was nervous on the first day. Then my brother, a junior, showed me where all my classes were, so I kind of figured out what I was doing."

Whether or not the high school's scary reputation endured after the first day, freshmen felt better knowing their classmates got just as confused. They found comfort knowing that everyone seemed baffled by their locker combinations and which cafeteria to attend.

"Last year, I remember how frustrated I became when my locker wouldn't open after the third attempt. Teachers expect you to bring your books and to be on time," Nikole Kost (10) said.

Luckily, the freshman year remained a right of passage for all students, and not just a select scared few.

The band won the AA class at the event, taking all caption awards.

prank galore

Harmless
jokes flood families and friends

story: e. knell (9)

Throughout the high school hallways, pranksters constantly played jokes on others, both friends and foes, and not just in April. Bored in class and letting their minds wander, teenagers flawlessly planned jokes, both fun and harmful, to play on each other. Living under the same roof made siblings an easy target for practical jokes. While not always received well, pranks occurred often between the four Palla sisters. Brittany Palla (9) said, "My sister froze all my underwear in the freezer overnight one time, and when I went to shower in the morning, she put all the frozen underwear back in my underwear drawer, and when I got out, they were still all frozen."

The danger of pranks came from those on the receiving end who did not find them funny.

"I was really angry when she did that. I can see how it'd be funny now, but at the time I was beyond furious," Palla said.

Organized pranking became a popular past time when a group of students set up a game called Water Wars. In teams of two, students randomly received targets whom they had to find, corner, and shoot with a squirt gun in under a week's time, all the while avoiding their own hunters.

Born on April 1

Do you find that people try to prank you more than others because of your birthday?

I really don't think that people try to prank me more than others. Most people tend to forget that it's actually April Fool's Day when my birthday rolls around. I do recall one time when my mom and dad decided to wake me up early in the morning with a few cans of Silly String. I think I was about eight years old at the time. That's the biggest prank that I can remember.

Discuss the best prank that you ever pulled off on your birthday.

One year, when I was about ten years old, my sister and I put Oscar, our dog, up in my room. We then opened the door and ran up and told our parents that he had run away. They ran downstairs and started looking for him outside. My dad was about to get into his car and drive around to find him. It lasted about a good 10 minutes before we decided to let them know that Oscar was safe and sound upstairs.

Discuss the best birthday that you ever had.

The best birthday that I ever had was when we played three hockey games in one day. We played at the Pittsburgh Ice Arena starting around eight in the morning. I remember scoring twice throughout the three games. Afterward, my parents took me out to dinner at Primanti Brothers. I love their burgers and fries. I like that they put cole slaw on their sandwiches.

Teacher/adviser goes beyond expectations

story: a. phillips 12)

A math wizard, a grammar nazi, a Photoshop expert, the 2012 PA Journalism Teacher of the Year, and often left out of the yearbook, math teacher and yearbook adviser Mr. Fantaski (fac.) went above and beyond the requirements of his job. Inside the classroom, Mr. Fantaski taught ACM and AGC. Always patient and with creative ways to explain concepts, he helped students learn every lesson. When not in room 307, Mr. Fantaski pretty much lived in the yearbook room, preparing spreads, proofreading stories, and revising captions. On more than one occasion he stayed long after the school day working hard with staff members to meet the latest deadline. When forced to work long into the night, Mr. Fantaski ensured nobody went hungry, disappearing and then reappearing with dinner for all. For 15 years, Mr. Fantaski found time to manage the responsibilities of his regular job, in addition to managing and maintaining a yearbook staff that consistently produced one of the top books in the entire state. When asked about the extra work he put in, Fantaski said, "It's not an easy task to improve from year to year. I know one thing—it's the kids that motivate me to move forward, both for yearbook and in class."

mrs. patterson

How do you balance dealing with daily attendance and all club finances?

I try to come in early every day so that I can get everything done. From sending letters to parents to keeping track of all the financial records for every club in the school, you really have to multi-task to complete everything that I have to do. It does help that I have computer programs to make it all easier. Still, when the computer goes down, it's like losing a limb for me.

Tell everyone some tidbits about your family.

I live with my husband Richard in Washington Township; we have been happily married for over 40 years. I have two boys, Richard and Eric. Both of them went to Kiski; Richard graduated in 1996, and Eric graduated in 1999. I have two wonderful grandchildren named Alyssa and Claire; Alyssa is four and a half, and Claire is two and a half. I love baking cookies, doing crafts, and building blanket tents with them both.

Noted as one of the most friendly secretaries in the school, how do you always manage to keep that signature smile on your face day after day?

You have to have a positive attitude, especially when things pile up. It does help to have the other secretaries in the office; we're quite a team. Additionally, having principals like Mr. C., Mr. G., and Mr. R. to work for makes my job a whole lot easier. They're always supportive and just great guys to work for.

Teachers dish on their high schools

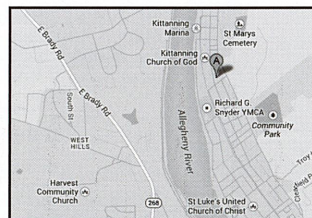

While the majority of teachers at the high school actually graduated from Kiski Area High School, several received their diplomas from other local schools in the area. Even though each school sat within a close proximity of KAHS in Vandergrift, many differences arose between the schools.

Freeport high school

"In 2004, I graduated with 150 other seniors. Not only did I know everyone in my class, but I knew everyone in the school. It's a lot different than Kiski."

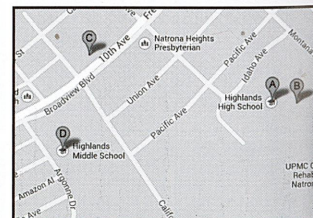

Ms. Pavlina (fac.)

Kittanning high school

"I didn't have as many freedoms like kids do now. Only seniors could go into the courtyard after eating lunch. Dress code was much more strict then, too."

Mrs. Flick (fac.)

Highlands high school

"School spirit was huge when I went to high school. I remember having pep assemblies every Friday. The principals even got involved."

Ms. Heasley (fac.)

Both went to Edinboro University to earn their bachelors degrees.

Mr. Fantaski (fac.)

Both have been actively involved with live theater since childhood.

Ms. Filippone (fac.)

Both have only one sibling, an older brother.

Mrs. Eichner (fac.)

Both marched in the 1997 marching band show, Jazz on Broadway.

Mr. Pityk (fac.)

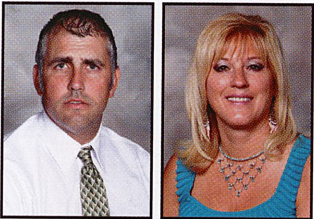

Both directed the Kiski Area Marching Band.

Discuss a fond memory that you have from your college years.

"I attended Seton Hill University where I thoroughly enjoyed taking walks in the fields across the beautiful campus. I also loved going to mixers at St. Vincent's."

Mrs. Brady (fac.)

"I went to Edinboro University. I really liked the country atmosphere. I liked going skiing, hunting, and fishing to get away from the academics."

Mr. Jewart (fac.)

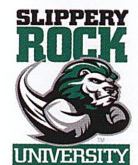

"I went to St. Vincent College, and that is where I met my husband. He happened to be my roommate's biology lab partner."

Mrs. Hald (fac.)

"I went to Duquesne University. I liked meeting people from all over the country and world there. I also met my future wife in the physics lab there."

Mr. Bruno (fac.)

"I went to college at Slippery Rock University and had the best time playing on basketball and volleyball league teams with my friends."

Teachers reveal how/why they entered the education field

As high school seniors quickly found out, picking a major and career posed a challenge. Teachers offered advice by sharing how they picked their teaching major just before graduating high school themselves. English 11 and creative writing teacher Mrs. Miller (fac.) knew in eighth grade that she wanted to pursue a career in English.

Mrs. Miller said, "Reading and writing were really the only areas I kicked major behind in, and my own English teachers were always my favorite. I later decided to go into teaching because I hoped to be as inspirational to future students as my own English teachers were to me."

However, not all teachers knew so early on what they wanted to do after high school. Physics teacher Mr. DeSantis (fac.) initially had little plans for college at all. Pushed by parents who knew he could do it, DeSantis ended up as an electrical engineer, later in life choosing the teaching field.

"I was actually still working as an engineer while getting my teaching degree at the same time. There were a lot of jobs for physics teachers at the time," Mr. DeSantis said.

Let's go Pitt!*

Dear Kali,

I can't believe you are graduating from high school! How did we get there so fast? I remember the day you were born like it was yesterday, and it was absolutely one of the happiest days of my life! I also remember the first day I walked you into your new Kindergarten room! I cried that day, too! I thought then, 2014, the year you would graduate, was so very far away. Now it is here! You're 18, and I'm so proud of the young woman you have become!! You are kind, generous, beautiful, and multi-talented! Please know that I am so happy for you, and I'm so excited for this new chapter in your life. My brain knows this, but my heart feels something different. Remember the things I taught you when you are faced with challenges because there will be bigger ones in life. Remember your morals, your values, and your integrity. Hold on to those. Remember that you ALWAYS have a choice and that the choices you make can and will be positive or negative you determine that outcome. Take responsibility for your choices. Don't blame others, and look past the moment! Be a LEADER, be a FRIEND, and PLEASE be good to yourself. I love you, Kali, and I am so proud of you! I know you will do great things! Have a blessed life and STAND PROUD because you are a WINNER in every way!

Mom!

Dylan...

Wow... time flew by way too fast. Every day was a busy adventure with you. But, we loved it. Now, it is your time to venture out and really get down to business. We are the proudest parents of a wonderful son.

XOXO,

*Dad,
Mom,
Hollie, and Jess*

We remember watching you take your first unsteady steps—your legs wobbly and unsure. We wanted to catch you, protect you, and keep you safe. But, soon your steps became steadier, and you ran further from us. We loved watching you grow more independent and mature, even as you became more separate and individual. Now we watch you take your first steps into the world. A vast and rich tapestry awaits you. Though we still want to pull you to us and keep you safe, we want you to know we are so proud of the tremendous person you have become. You have our love, our pride, and our respect. As we watch you venture out into this new and exciting stage of your life, we know your steps will become more sure footed, and soon you will be running once more toward the infinite possibilities you can dream for yourself.

*We love you,
Mom and Daddy*

Sammie...

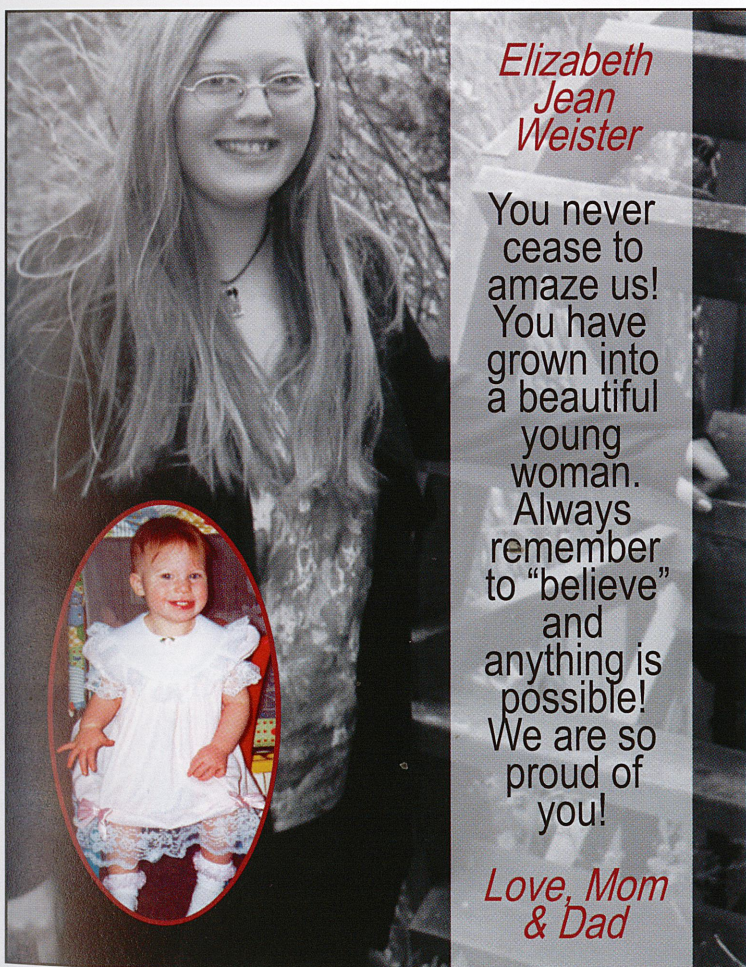

Jesse... I may want to strangle you 99.9% of the time, but I am happy that you and Andrew have each other's backs. Congratulations, and I am excited to see everything you accomplish after high school because you are one hard-working kid.

Congrats, you two!
Love, Alexis

Andrew... I may want to strangle you 98% of the time, but I love you, and I am so unbelievably proud of your accomplishments! Dream big, babe, because you're part of the big green family now! I cannot wait to visit and watch you play ball at the next level.

We are so very proud of the man that you have become. It really does go by in the blink of an eye. Always know that we love you unconditionally. We have no doubt that you will accomplish anything that you set your mind to with the same determination, perseverance, honesty, integrity, and morals that have brought you this far.

At the end of the day, when each sprint is over, we hope that you can look in the mirror and say that you did your very best; you did the right thing, and you did it the right way... and then you can smile and be satisfied with how each race turned out.

Emily,

When you were a little girl, I remember giving you challenges and allowing you to make your own decisions. How many times you fell off that pony... and I dusted you off. Still, every time you bit your lip, wiped your tears, and got back in that saddle. I remember your first blue ribbon and championship. You have exceeded my expectations in every way. Love your friends, love your family, and love the Lord. Your journey is just beginning, and it's going to be a great ride.

Thomas,

Where do we begin? We are truly blessed to have such a wonderful son. You light up a room with your brilliant smile, contagious laughter, and easy personality. You have always been so eager to learn new things, to embrace change, and to fully engage in life. We know with all of that going for you, on top of being so bright – the future will hold amazing things for you! Keep that wonderfully optimistic spirit you have and always be kind and sweet like you are now. You are going to achieve great things. Always believe in yourself because you are more amazing than you think!

We love you,

Mom, Dad, and Allison

It just seemed like yesterday you came into our lives. These years have gone by so quickly. We have enjoyed every minute watching you grow into a sweet and handsome young man. We are so proud of you.

Love you with all our hearts,

Mom, Pap Pap, & Grandma

Oh Miss Maddy...

What a beautiful young lady you have become! We cannot tell you enough how proud we are of you! We have enjoyed watching you from the soccer field to the swimming pool to the stage! We are and always will be your biggest fans! You have amazed us with your talent.

More than that, though, you have amazed us with the person you have become. Your outgoing and loving personality gives you the ability to make others smile, and that gives you the confidence to be you. Your faith gives you the ability to stand strong and remain true to yourself and to God. Remember to keep respecting yourself so others are able to respect you as well.

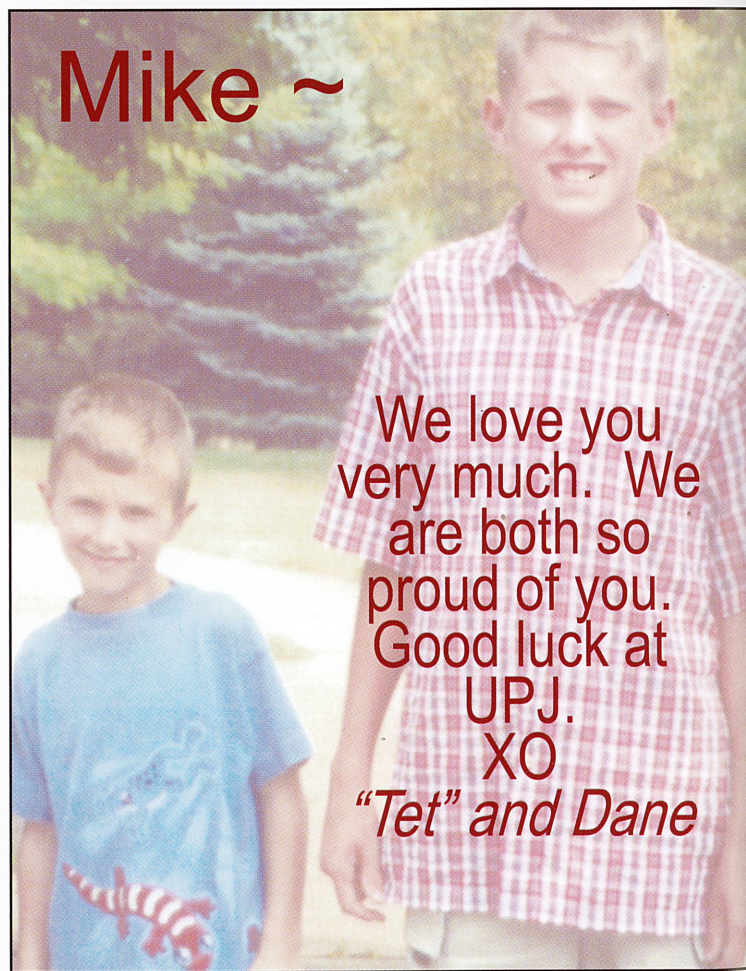

You told us you would never grow up (and we would not get older... LOL). Of course, that was impossible, but we certainly wish you could have stayed little "just a little longer!" What is not impossible, though, is anything you set your mind, heart, soul, and hard work to. Most importantly, with God, nothing is impossible! So, with your trust in Him – follow your dreams! We will watch in amazement and always be here for you. We love you like nobody loves you. We are thankful and blessed to be your parents.

Ant,

You have never settled for normal, and that is what makes you so very special. You have had the fortitude and extraordinary character to succeed as a Cavalier for six years. As Kiski's starting center, you never missed a single snap. More impressive was the way you played with every ounce of effort, with all your heart and soul, never giving up and never once complaining. This has shown us a tiny glimpse of the great man you are becoming. Watching you head off to college will be unimaginable, but we know you are beginning a new and wonderful part of your journey. Words cannot express our deepest love or the immense pride of our amazing, funny, smart, incredible son!

"...This son of mine I love so well... And all the toil it takes... I'd give to him a garden... And keep clear of snakes. But the one thing he most treasures... is to make his own mistakes."

"...He goes charging on the cliffs of life... a reckless mountaineer. I could help him not to stumble... I could warn him what to fear. I could shout until I'm breathless... And he'd still refuse to hear..."

It's only in Eden grows a rose without a thorn... and your children start to leave you... on the day that they were born...

...the deeper is your love for them... The crueler is the cost...

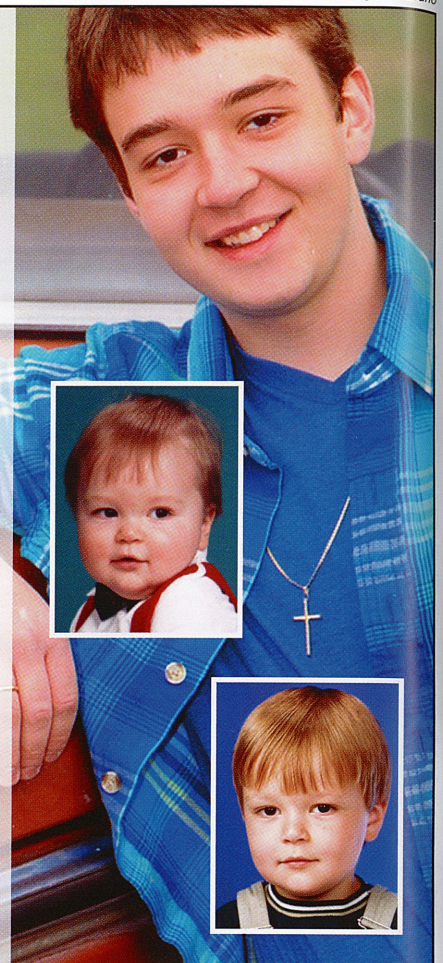

...But you cannot close the acorn, Once the oak begins to grow... And you cannot close your heart to what it fears and needs to know...

...That the hardest part of love ...And the rarest part of love ...And the truest part of love Is the letting go...

Excerpts from Children of Eden
Stephen Schwartz

Joe... Words cannot express how proud we are to call you "son." It has been a joy and a privilege to watch you grow from a sweet little boy into a loving and thoughtful young man. We love you very much!

TO MY "ONE IN A MILLION SON"

TYLER,

When I had my first baby, he was just a "little boy." His name was "Tyler William," an angel sent from above! As the years went by, you have made me so proud of you. Thank you for helping me through the tough times and also for sharing many of our fun times. Tyler, you are able to achieve "anything" you want in life, and so far you have. You just have to believe in yourself, like I believe in you. Just dream it, and go after it, and you will definitely succeed. You have grown into such a handsome, loving, sweet, caring, and trustworthy, "Young Man." I am so proud and blessed that you are my son, very outgoing and lots of fun. People have actually gone out of their way to tell me what a wonderful son I have. I know you will go on with your life when you enter the real world, and you will be very successful in everything you do. Just enjoy life as it comes to you because it really is too short. Just take one day at a time, and live it to the fullest. Always remember how much I love you and will always be here for you. Good luck in the future, and don't ever forget you are "one in a million," and I love you so much! Honey, even though you are all grown up, you will always be my: "Little Boy!"

We love you with all our hearts,

Mom and Nikole

Jordan Renee,

January 1, 1996 was the best New Year's Day of your father's and my lives, and every year after that has been a joy for us to watch you grow into a beautiful, smart, wonderful young woman. We are so very proud of you and know you will take the world by storm when you graduate. Know that we love you very much, and we will always have your back!

Love you,

Mom, Dad, Lindsey,
Dalton and Frankie

Stace,

We have been very blessed to have a daughter like you. You are everything a parent could wish for in child. You are levelheaded, funny, compassionate, and goal-oriented... to list just a few. We have watched you develop into an exceptional young woman. I have such wonderful memories of you growing up and have enjoyed going to all your soccer games and chorus recitals, among all of your other activities. The future is open wide for you to explore, and I know that you will excel in anything you put your mind to. Continue to beat to your own drum, and you will go far!

Just remember, good things come to those who believe, better things come to those who are patient; the best things come to those who don't give up.

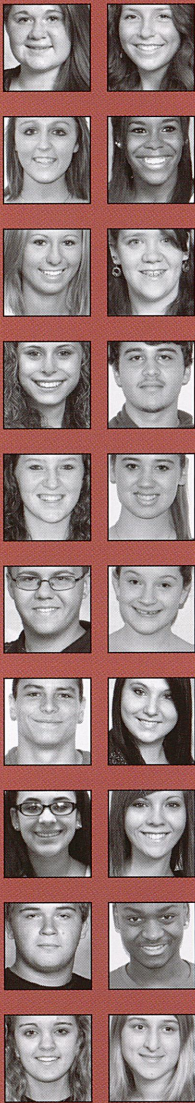

Love, Mom, Dad and Steph

Dear Big Bean...

More Love

Ever Really Know...
Mom

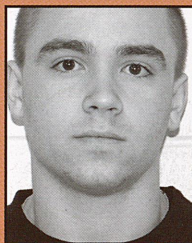

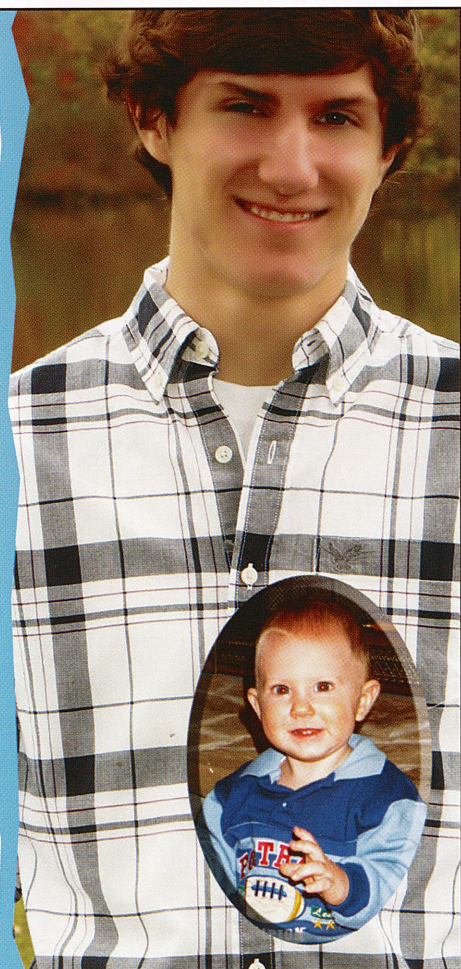

You really did get big! Well, maybe not in size... but certainly in brains, character, and heart! I prayed from the time that you were swaddled in my arms that you would be compassionate, honest, tenacious, dependable, sincere, and most of all—loving. Anyone who has taken the time to know and be loved by you has been blessed by your depth of connection and loyalty. It's amazing how my prayers continue to be answered. I see the maturity and wisdom that you have gleaned and applied from both your accomplishments and mistakes—from the times that the Lord gave and the times He took away, from the happiness when expectations were fulfilled and in the sadness when you were sometimes let down. It has all molded you into a beautiful young lady who knows where she came from and is not afraid to aim for her highest potential. Happiness can only be found when our circumstances allow it. But, as you have seen in your 17 years, life gives you very few things that you can control. So, I wish you the secret of joy and contentment, a gift to your spirit that can survive any outcome or crisis! You have persevered through more at your young age than most will see in a lifetime, and you are richer for it. I am even richer still, for we have journeyed these years and obstacles together. You have been a gift to me that keeps on giving, and I thank God for every day that I wake up and get to share another word, memory, thought, experience or emotion with you, my beautiful Princess! I am so excited, for I believe you are special, important, and created for a great purpose! Congratulations on a job well done, Michaela!

Michael John Rukavina,

It seems like only yesterday we were dropping you off at preschool!

"I can't do it myself, I am too little mom," was what you said. Wow! Look how far you've come doing so much for yourself!! You have become such an amazing young man and role model for your little brother, Joe. You are mature, kind, compassionate, and so very intelligent. You will go far in life... just keep believing in yourself and work hard!! We are all so proud of you and can't wait to see where your next journey in life takes you. We will always be behind you with lots of love and prayers! The best is yet to come.

Brian...

You have provided us with so much pride and pleasure on your way to becoming a young man—not to mention comedic relief with your own brand of humor. You have grown to become so diverse that your talents are greater than you can even imagine. Along the way, you have literally always worn a lot of hats (and had a lot of fun with it too). Surely that will serve you well as you go through adulthood because having experience in wearing different hats is something you will always need to do. May you never "lose your inner dinosaur," and remember that your real boss is the one who walks around under your hat!

To our baby girl,

What fun we have had from fishing the Kiski, weeks at Pine Springs, and cheering you on at the ball fields. With your caring nature and strong charitable ways, we can always count on you to help when we need you. You are sure to be a great success in the future. It has been such a joy to watch you grow into such a beautiful young lady; we can't wait to see what you do next. Best of luck with all your endeavors... we will love you forever and ever.

Kevin,

It seems like only yesterday that I was taking you to preschool, and here you are graduating. There are not enough words to tell you how proud I am of the wonderful young man you've become. I know all of your hard work will make you successful in everything you achieve. Dream Big!!

Love you, Kevin...

"My family has always served in the military for as long as I can remember. I have aunts and uncles who were in all the branches except the Air Force. My father was in the Army for many years. I chose to enter into the Air Force specifically because I've always wanted to help people and keep them safe. I feel that serving in the Air Force is a bit safer than direct ground combat. I hope that I'll end up stationed overseas."

2006-2007

Dear Brianne,

What can we say? This has been a monumental year. You have had to endure so much in your young life so far. Our only hope for our only daughter is happiness & joy. We hope that you have found this in your graduation. Remember... what is meant to be will always find a way... and always be true to yourself.

Love, Mum & Dad

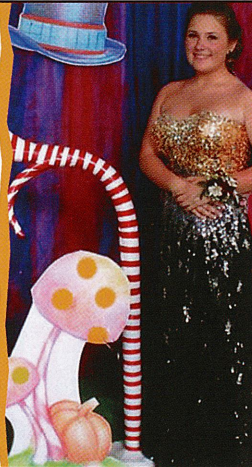

Shoot for the stars and make all your dreams come true. We love you!

Dad,
Mom, &
Michael

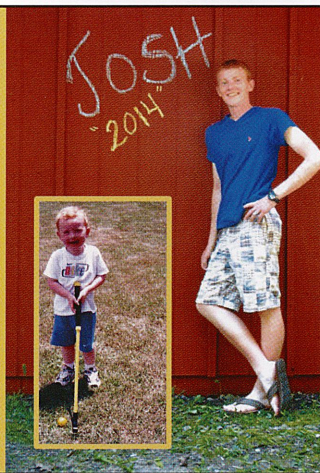

Lexie...

From the day you were born, we knew you were an incredible young lady... smart, beautiful, and funny. We can't wait until you are famous! Love you, baby girl! Mom, Dad, Lauren, Zac, and Mackenzie

Josh, you are an inspiration. You have a natural tenacity and ability to accept life as it unfolds. You are the son that every parent dreams of having. Your high energy and positive attitude has made us smile every day. We could not be more thankful for you and more proud of the man you have become. We are excited for you to embrace the next phase of life. Have fun, and enjoy every single day.

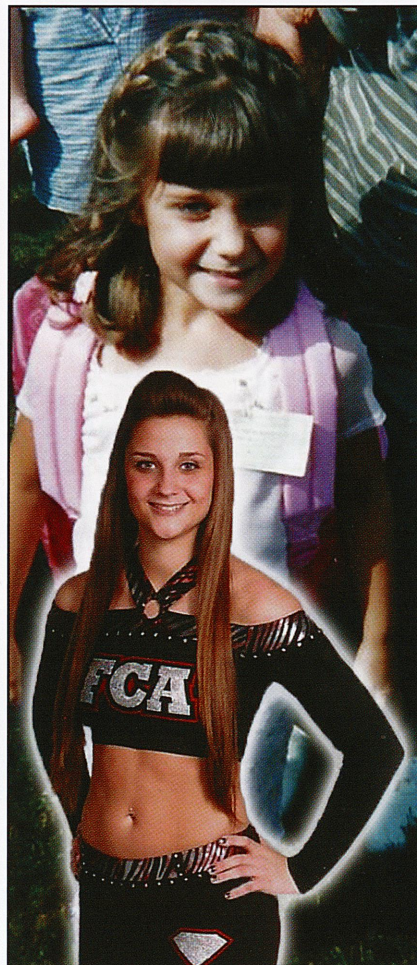

We love you!
Mom and Bruce

B-Man...

You're on the right path. Keep running. We can't wait to see what awaits you across the finish-line.

Love,
Mom and Dad

If time could only stand still, I'd go through this journey with you all over again... with the daily routines and the schedules. Though they seemed to never come to an end, I wish they would linger a little longer.

We look back now and see how precious those years have become. Now, it's time for you to venture off to seek out your life's realization and accomplish your dreams. We will cherish those memories, and we truly look forward to your future.

We are very proud of you, and we are always here for you. Still, most of all, we love you!

Love you, baby girl!
Mom and Dad

It seems like just yesterday you were crawling across the floor... then you walked... then the first days of kindergarten, junior high, and high school. Thanks for 18 years of smiles, tears, hopes, and dreams. You're finally ready to embark on your greatest journey yet. Good luck, and we love you!
D.J., Jay, and Mom

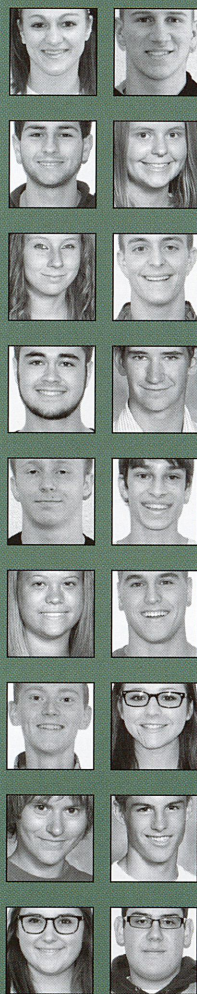

Mitchell...

Only you have control of your future. Reach far inside and bring to life all your dreams. Strive to create your own successes. Give of yourself with caring, compassion, and passion that is part of your soul. Embrace the little things and individual moments, for they truly mean the most. Love with all your heart! Always believe in yourself! Never lose sight of living to the fullest, each and every God-given day, this thing we call life!

All our love to you!

Letters from the co-editors

On the first day of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything parents need to know about Parent Ads.

The form outlines pricing, requirements for the ad, and relative deadlines. The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad, and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only a limited amount of space for Parent Ads.

Hence, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Parent Ads once the designated amount of space has become filled.

"Everyone achieves milestones through life. I know this book is a great one for me."

When I was told I was going to be in charge of the high school yearbook, my first thought was that I would never be able to pull off such a task. Knowing that I had to immortalize memories for the students and faculty terrified me. I knew that I could never do it on my own, and I was beyond blessed to have Mr. Fantaski as an adviser.

I knew from the time I joined the reporting staff that I'd have to have someone by my side to make decisions. My decisiveness ranged from knowing exactly what I wanted and not stopping until I got it to having a mental breakdown because I was too overwhelmed with making decisions. Fortunately, I had Amber Phillips by my side as a co-editor. She was the one who always pulled through for me and did far more work than anyone could imagine. I offer special thanks to Amber because we always saw eye to eye, and that's a hard relationship to find with someone. It's much easier to make decisions when someone else always gives you their honest opinion, especially when they reflect the same thoughts as yours.

To Megan, Lindsey, and Jayne—Reporting Staff

No matter what I asked from you, you did it in a heartbeat and were always asking me what you could do next to help.

To Sammy, Morgan, Taylor, and Understaff—Literary Staff

Even if I didn't personally assign you duties, I knew that you made Amber's job a lot easier, and that made our book possible.

To Emma, Bryanna, and Jenna—Business Staff

I always knew the business end was taken care of, and I never had to worry. Thank you for that.

To Courtney and Tyra—Photoshop Staff

You've blown my mind with all you accomplished. I know you gave up so much personal time to do all the Photoshop work; your dedication is admirable.

To Katie, Dar, Cass, Chey, and Nikole—Photo Staff

This book would be nothing without you. If a picture is worth a thousand words, then this book will never stop speaking. Your work was outstanding.

To Cari, Cheryl, and PF—

It was a pleasure working under you all throughout the years. You kept our yearbook alive and you devoted more time and effort than I ever thought possible.

I offer my final thanks to the class of 2014 and to my wonderful mom because without you guys, I wouldn't be where I am today. We've captured memories that an ordinary yearbook would never accomplish. Time flew by this year, and I can't believe it's all over.

"My best decision over the past four years was joining yearbook. No regrets."

I never imagined writing a letter from the editor. But, three books later, here I am, starting with my favorite staff—my own.

To Literary Staff...

Morgan, Sammy, Taylor, and Emily—I couldn't thank you all enough. You met every deadline, willingly took my advice, and never failed to do more than you were asked. Taylor and Emily—You're both naturally gifted writers so my best advice is to stay organized and stay ahead.

To Reporting Staff...

Megan, Lindsey, and Jayne—I couldn't be more impressed with you three this year. When there were 20 unanswered folio questions and 15 empty captions, somehow you found the time to do them. I don't know how you found the time to get everything finished.

To Business Staff...

While people often forget about that aspect of a yearbook, never doubt its importance. Emma—I hesitate to thank you under the business staff category because you wrote stories, got quotes, and organized books bought; you did it all. Bryanna, Jenna, and Tamara—I'm confident that the three of you will be able to take over the management of next year's book.

To Photography Staff...

Katie—Without you, this wouldn't even be a yearbook; it would just be a regular book, and that would be lame. Dar, Nikole, Cheyenne, and Cass—The four of you have so much talent and potential. The pictures will only get better.

To Photoshop Staff...

Courtney and Tyra—You both deserve a lot of thanks and praise. Every spread has something that required careful editing.

To My Partner in Crime...

Kayla—I couldn't have asked for anyone better to work with. Sure, we often talked more than we worked, but eventually we got the job done. You didn't want to write long stories, I didn't want to get quotes, and we shared gym shoes—the perfect partnership. From late nights in Spain, to sunny days in LA, and long conversations in the yearbook room, I'll miss the memories.

To My Favorite Grammar Nazi...

Mr. Fantaski—It's been three years and I still can't type a decent word with you standing over my shoulder. I've been a pain, and I've been picky, but despite our disputes, we had a knack for compromising on what sounded best anyway. Thank you for everything you've done, from teaching me the ropes of yearbook writing to finding time to listen when I needed to talk. From little Vandergrift, to the Spanish countryside, to Hollywood Boulevard, we've definitely spent a lot of time together. In that time I've come to both respect and admire you. I still don't know how you have time to do everything you do, which just makes me appreciate you even more. You'll always be my favorite math major, piano playing, picture editing, grammar Nazi.

The yearbook staff and the senior photographer conduct an assembly with all prospective seniors in the spring of their junior year to distribute all pertinent information concerning senior pictures. The senior photographer offers various times for individual appointments, as well as a wide variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer. However, each student must pay a sitting fee for the processing and developing of the pictures. This year, Hourglass Photo charged $15. This price may increase from year-to-year due to rising costs involved.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student schedules his/her appointment on time, arrives for the shoot on time, and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates, and will include these in the information given out at the senior portrait assembly.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interest of all students.

For the 2014-2015 school year, the district will utilize the talents of Ms. Paige Duckworth for all senior portraits. Her establishment, Hourglass Photo, resides at 2 Labelle-Vue Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690. Telephone: 724-568-3128.

senior specials info

While considered inappropriate in some judging forums, the Campus staff feels that the Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. Sometime after the winter holiday break, the yearbook staff designates one week for all seniors to vote on their favorites in a wide variety of categories. The staff collectively decides which categories to include and which to eliminate.

Only the yearbook adviser counts the ballots for each and every category; yearbook staff members play no role in the election. This eliminates many validity questions.

To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a Senior Special, no senior may win two categories with the exception of the "Best Friends" and "Class Couple" categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook adviser governs the final decision on how to award each category.

client satisfaction

Because the yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will not refund money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them and cannot display any obvious damage done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes the property of the staff and may be resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the adviser determines that the book has a major flaw such as missing or upside-down pages. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the adviser.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a cancelled check to demonstrate proof of the purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

book pricing/sales

Students order books during Campus Weeks, the first two full weeks after Labor Day. (Note: Campus Weeks are subject to change depending on when school starts each year.) Each student must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden box outside room 106.

Students may pay half during Campus Weeks and half after the December holiday break, if they wish. Still, if the student misses the announced deadline for second payments, a late fee may occur.

After Campus Weeks, students will pay an additional $10 for each book ordered.

The staff also offers the opportunity for students to order books online at yearbookforever.com. Additionally, those students have the opportunity to purchase various other items, but only when ordering online.

If there are books available at the end of the year, the yearbook staff will sell them on a first-come-first-serve basis.

senior directory info

Determined by deadlines, the yearbook staff designates a single week, usually in January or February, for seniors to complete a directory sheet that asks for all of the clubs, sports, music ensembles, and future plans for each senior. The yearbook staff includes only directory information submitted by the designated deadline and reserves the right to expunge any entries that include falsified information.

winter Pastimes

Located in West Deer Township, Kenny Bonelli (10) shows his excitement for the new fallen snow. Bonelli said, "This was one of the most extraordinary winters that I've ever experienced. Between the snow amounts and the cold temperatures, I think we had more days off than we had on." Bonelli snowboarded to pass the winter time.

Leap to what? What were we leaping off? Where would that leap take us? Did we even know? Hearing Dr. Meighan stand atop the blue and gold stage constructed at the 50 yard line of historical Davis Field and call out our names one by one, each of us realized just how little we knew about the leap we were about to take.

We'd dreamt of this day forever, but now it felt too fast and too bittersweet. With our names reverberating through the stadium, with that first footstep on the bottom stair of the stage, with our hands shaking our superintendent's, elation and terror trembled straight through each of us.

After pausing to smile for Mom and Dad, we walked towards our cliff to descend. The sunset gleamed just over the crest of the Route 56 bypass, and as the sun set on June 12, the sun also set on our adolescence. No turning back now. One...two...three steps. One grand leap, one hefty edge.

And one soft landing. Turning a full circle to return to plastic blue chairs aligned in a perfect grid, we couldn't help but wonder who among us would show up for the reunion in fifty years. Who would we end up seeing on a daily basis? Who would end up living on only in our memories? Only time would tell, but right then, it was our time to celebrate.

everything about the book

This book utilized 100# matte paper for all pages inside. The Campus staff utilized Adobe InDesign and Photoshop from its CS6 suite to create the publication. The staff used three font families in the book: Poplar, Shark Random Funnyness, and Arial. On the matte-finish cover, Walsworth printed the four-color lithocote material with registered embossing on the front and a clear silkscreen on the front and back. The staff also created different front and back four-color endsheets.

The staff owned two Canon Rebel D-60 cameras. Because the high school had no yearbook class, all work was done extra-curricularly. The staff completed all tasks using only two computers.

Campus Pricing

Book Price: $65 if ordered by the end of the two Campus weeks and $75 afterward.

Parent Ads: $50 for 1/8 page and $85 for 1/4 page.

Don't forget accomplishments

The 2014 Campus Yearbook Staff belonged to various professional organizations that included PSPA, NSPA, CSPA, and JEA. In PSPA judging, the 2013 Campus won its third PA Keystone All-State Championship in a row for journalistic excellence... the state's highest yearbook achievement possible. Additionally, the book earned All-American status in NSPA judging and a gold ranking in CSPA. Also, Balfour Publishing chose the 2013 Campus as a national sample and featured the book in their coveted compilation book, The Yearbook Yearbook.

everyone who helped out

The 2013-2014 Campus Staff utilized the printing talents of Walsworth Publishing - 306 N. Kansas Ave. - Marceline, MO 64658. Cheryl Franzmann represented the book locally and Cheryl Ball served as the account executive at the plant.

Paige Duckworth - Hourglass Studio - 2 LaBelle Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690 - 724-568-3128 - provided all senior and underclass pictures. She also took all the club group photographs and the majority of the sports team shots.
